Korea rips off Army

(c) New York Times

Washington — Army investigative reports have concluded that the South Korean government has condoned if not controlled a practice of collusive bidding among Korean contractors that is costing U.S. military units in South Korea about $20 million annually. At least until 1973, according to the Army reports, the South Korean Central Intelligence Agency controlled all the bidding by South Korean firms on goods and services purchased by the U.S. Army in South Korea.

It could rival Watergate

(c) New York Times

Washington — The sweeping investigation of South Korean political influence here, which has a suspect list that includes 90 members of Congress, could rival the Watergate inquiry as a major expose of political corruption, senior U.S. officials report.

It's a plush stack

Las Vegas, Nev. (UPI) — Twelve students at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, stacked 140 mattresses 17 feet high outside the school's only dormitory.

Some of the mattresses were dropped out of windows of the three-story building. After a while, the stack of bedding began to sway in winds gusting up to 50 miles an hour and toppled over a few times before the chore was completed.

But when it was done, the tired students had a place to lie down.

Pound hits new bottom

London (AP) — The British pound dropped to a record low closing price of $1.5720 in late trading Wednesday as the Labor government came under increased leftwing pressure to scrap its anti-inflation policies.

Rumors in London financial circles had Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey handing his resignation to Prime Minister James Callaghan. The rumors were denied at the offices of both ministers and a spokesman for Callaghan called the reports "rubbish."

Help sent to British

(c) New York Times

Washington — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has ordered his top African adviser, Assistant Secretary of State William Schaufele Jr., to fly to Geneva to do whatever he can to help the British prevent a breakdown in the negotiations between black and white Rhodesians for a new black-led government in Rhodesia.

California is Ford's

(c) New York Times

San Francisco — The general expectations among politicians of both parties is that President Ford will carry California by a narrow margin over Jimmy Carter. This is the largest state in the Union, with 45 electoral votes.

Announcement expected

(c) New York Times

Ex-Sen. Gurney is acquitted

Orlando Fla. (AP) — A federal jury Wednesday found former Sen. Edward J. Gurney innocent of a charge of lying to a 1974 grand jury about a massive political shakedown scheme.

The verdict by the jury of eight men and four women, who deliberated an hour and 18 minutes, ended three years of investigation and prosecution for the 62-year-old Republican, the first Senator indicted in office in 50 years.

Gurney had been charged with lying to the grand jury about his knowledge of a scheme in which his subordinates collected more than $400,000 in Gurney's name by promising builders favors with the Federal Housing Administration.

"I have a feeling of great relief that this long ordeal is finally over, a feeling of great satisfaction that we've beaten these mean, vicious people from the government," a smiling Gurney told reporters immediately after leaving the courtroom.

"They destroyed a United States senator, blackened my name and besmirched my character," said the bitter ex-Senator about the Justice Department.

Gurney said the prosecution had been carried out "on flimsy evidence gotten from plea-bargainers," referring to his one-time fund-raiser Larry Williams and others who testified for the government.

Gurney gained national prominence as a tough-questioning defender of former President Richard M. Nixon during the Watergate hearings.

Asked if he thought Watergate had anything to do with his prosecution, the tall, grey-haired Gurney told reporters on the steps of the federal building that "I can only conjecture about Watergate . . . I expect it probably did."

Gurney was charged with lying to a 1974 federal grand jury in Jacksonville when he said he didn't know until mid-1973 that his fund-raiser, Williams, was paying expenses of his field offices and staff from an illegal political slush fund.

The charge was the last one remaining from the scandal that sent four men to prison.

The scandal halted the political career of the World War II hero, who decided not to seek re-election in 1974 after the charges were made.

The perjury case centered on the activities in 1971-

73 of Williams, who testified for the government that he pressured Florida builders for some $400,000 in Gurney's name. He said they paid in exchange for favored treatment from FHA offices in the state.

Williams, 32, of Orlando, had told the trial jury that he told Gurney everything about his activities since Gurney hired him in 1971.

In the end it all boiled down to the jury believing the former senator over his former fund-raiser.

Gurney had faced a maximum five-year prison sentence and fine of $10,000 if he had been convicted.

The key element in the case was a meeting held in Gurney's Winter Park home between him and Williams on June 11, 1972. Williams testified:

"I told the senator that for the last year and a half I had been collecting money from FHA (builder) sponsors . . . the senator expressed no surprise about this. He expressed to me that he expected something like that had been happening."

Williams and other government witnesses testified that Gurney knew details of the shakedown operation. Williams said he had told the senator that the funds were used for office and staff expenses.

Earlier, defense attorney C. Harris Dittmar typified the boyish William as a liar, while the prosecutor had defended Williams in closing arguments as a man who "finally saw the light and started telling the truth" to investigators in late 1973.

"Maybe the fellow doesn't mean evil," Dittmar told the jury. "But he just doesn't know the truth and doesn't know how to tell the truth . . . He lied here in this courtroom."

Prosecutor Barnes viewed Gurney as deliberately hiding his knowledge of the total fund raising operation from the grand jury.

"We don't say Mr. Gurney got any of the money himself . . . The issue here is whether he knowingly made false statements to that grand jury," said the Washington-based attorney.

He said Gurney was in political trouble and needed money, so he hired Williams on Jan. 19, 1971, to go out and get it. "He specified that builders and contractors would be included as sources of funds," Barnes said of Gurney.

Dole takes stump for faltering McC

By Don Walton

Star Staff Writer

Sporting a John McCollister campaign sticker, GOP vice presidential nominee Robert Dole Wednesday urged Nebraskans to follow their Republican instincts next week.

"We're counting on Nebraska and on the Midwest to offset Carter victories in other parts of the country," the Kansas senator told several hundred cheering supporters at a McCollister rally in Lincoln.

It was Dole's second campaign trip to Nebraska — but this one was designed to try to help the GOP salvage a Senate seat which it is in danger of losing at next week's election.

Nebraska is considered relatively "safe" for President Ford in his top-of-the-ticket battle with Jimmy Carter.

So this was no trip to more firmly grasp a mere five electoral votes for the Ford-Dole ticket six days before the election.

The polls which show McCollister trailing Democrat Edward Zorinsky for Roman Hruska's Senate seat prompted Dole to add a Nebraska stop to his afternoon flight from Indiana to New Mexico.

"John's a good friend of mine," Dole told newsmen at the airport. "I suggested we stop by and help."

Later, McCollister was delivering an urgent get-out-the-vote message to the rally audience.

"I want to make sure that you understand that it's going to be close," the Omaha congressman stressed.

Second District GOP congressional nominee Lee Terry of Omaha, who is embroiled with Democrat John Cavanaugh in what appears to be the closest House race, also showed up to share the spotlight.

If Ford wins, Dole told Nebraskans, his new vice president will be assigned the job of helping expand sales of grain.

"We'll push food-for-peace sales and commercial exports," he promised.

"The President has said I would have an active role to play in agricultural exports. I would be an international salesman."

As he told Nebraskans on his first campaign visit last month, the Kansan said the 1975 grain embargo was "a mistake" which will not happen again — unless some unforeseen "national emergency" requires it.

The Ford-Dole farm policy would stress "full production, fair prices for consumers and good income for farmers," he said.

Under Ford, he said, "the American farmer has been freed from dependence on federal Treasury payments not to produce."

Farm exports are three times what they were in 1970, Dole noted.

Carter, he said, would "build up huge government-owned grain reserves" which could be dumped on the market to depress prices.

And Carter would "set up a vast array of mechanisms to impede farm exports," including export licenses, Dole warned.

On other matters, Dole said another specific responsibility which would be assigned to him by Ford would be to secure an accounting of the missing in action in Southeast Asia.

That is Ford's priority while Carter's is "a blanket pardon . . . for those who left this country in a time of need," the senator declared.

Dole reiterated his opposition to gun control, his support for a strong defense budget, his concerns about the influence of organized labor and possible repeal of right-to-work laws.

The choice for voters next week is a "moderate to conservative" GOP ticket or the "ultraliberal" Democratic team of Carter and Sen. Walter Mondale, he said.

Propane leak empties town

Stratton (AP) — Townspeople in this southwest Nebraska community were nervously awaiting word early Thursday on whether they would have to evacuate for a second time in several hours because of a propane leak.

"We're trying to get hold of the state fire marshal in Sidney to help us decide what to do," said Police Chief Ron Longline. "It was about a block away when the first leak occurred (about 9 p.m.). It gushed about 20 feet into the air."

The leak occurred when a pipe from a tanker truck burst as propane gas was being transferred to a 1,000-gallon storage tank at Miller Manufacturing, a farm implement plant that employs about 100 people in the daytime and 35 on the night shift.

"They moved out real good," he said. "We sent 'em east." He said the evacuation order was broadcast on loudspeakers and citizens band radios.

"It happened in the middle of the football game," said Irene Kisela, wife of the fire chief. "It was during the third quarter, I think. Everybody was on the field trying to get their kids. Almost the whole town (population 480) goes to the game."

"I grabbed my in-laws and mother and we went 11 miles out," she said. "You could smell the stuff four miles out of town. It hung thick in the air." The town has no nursing homes and its only hospital recently closed so the number of bed-ridden people that had to be evacuated was not great.

Bust on streets on side of a bus

London (AP) — A bust on the side of a bus is travelling the streets of London these days.

Some of the famous double-decker buses are carrying an advertising poster depicting a nude woman embracing her lover and advertising clothes.

"She's a very beautiful lady and we don't think anybody in this day and age will object to this kind of advertising," said a London Transport spokesman Wednesday.

The posters advertise a firm of clothing designers and manufacturers. The girl featured on the 30 buses carrying the posters is pictured lying on her side. The posters stretch the length of each bus.

"No doubt we will get a few complaints," said Michael Mountain, London Transport's commercial advertising manager, "but in no way is it salacious."

TV weatherman needs 18 stitches

Omaha (UPI) — An Omaha television weatherman was allegedly attacked by a woman who brandished a paring knife Wednesday after he attempted to greet her at the station's studios.

Authorities said Dale Munson, 45, a WQOW employee for 12 years, was taken to an Omaha hospital by a fire department rescue unit where he was treated and released.

Authorities said Munson received 12 stitches in the face and six in an arm from knife wounds received during the incident at the WQOW studios in central Omaha.

Police said a suspect, Joyce Shinsle, about 35, was booked for felonious assault with a cutting instrument and would be held in custody until a bond setting hearing in municipal court Thursday.

Police said they were treating the incident as an "unprovoked assault" for the time being. Authorities said Munson received a call from the WQOW receptionist advising someone wanted to see him in the lobby of the station's studios.

When Munson arrived in the lobby, authorities said he stuck out his hand to greet a woman, who was allegedly holding a paring knife behind her back.

The woman reportedly attacked Munson with the knife, authorities said, and he attempted to back away from her and fight her off.

Authorities said Munson managed to wrestle the woman to the floor of the lobby where she was subdued by others responding to screams for help from the receptionist through the station's inter-office communications system.

Authorities said the woman was incoherent and muttered something about Munson injuring her son in some way. Authorities said Munson had never seen the woman before and was unaware of what motives she may have had for the incident.

Munson has been the weatherman on WQOW's early evening and late evening news for more than seven years.

In addition, Munson has a special feature show called "Munson on the Go" and has been active in various WQOW community affairs projects.

Dakota farmer, wife finally get electricity

By Gerald Kopplin

Artesian, S.D. (UPI) — Paul and Margaret Kopplin are reading without a kerosene lamp for the first time. Their 86-year-old farmhouse was just wired for electricity.

"I can't believe it," Mother said. "It's a dream come true." My parents waited 25 years to install electric power, although they own several old tractors, use a 6-year-old car and drive an old pickup truck.

Blair Kelsey of Inter-County Electric Cooperative in Mitchell, S.D., said he was aware of only one other farm family in a four-county area without electric power.

"They are just real conservative people who don't care for television and feel they can get their market news on the battery-operated radio," Kelsey said. "Their farming enterprise doesn't require large amounts of energy."

Low farm prices and frequent dry spells in the 1950s and 1960s forced postponement of a long-sought new home on the Kopplin farm. The flickering hope was extinguished in the current drought.

Conveniences are few. Mother and Dad carry water the distance of a football field from a free-flowing artesian well. There is no indoor plumbing. Part of the house is the original homestead shanty built on crumbling fieldstone.

"I don't know if this house is worth it," Mother said. "The floor and ceiling sag. I've always wanted a new home."

My parents have never had an electrical appliance. They used an ancient ice box until ice became hard to obtain in the mid 1950s, forcing them to buy a second hand propane gas refrigerator for $50. It still runs. "The first thing I want is a real refrigerator," my mother said when electricians wired the house. She got one.

My dad is fiercely independent. Twenty-five years ago, he refused to install electricity, partly out of fear of a monthly payment which he thought he couldn't afford on a marginal farm.

"When crops fail, how do you pay an electric bill?" Dad said. He is semi-retired now and gets a small social security check.

This summer the three Kopplin children, who are now grown, asked if they could repay some borrowed money by wiring the house. Dad gave in when we were repairing a piece of farm machinery and a hand drill didn't work. I said, "this would take 30 seconds with my electric drill." He agreed and said, "maybe we should get electricity."

Dad still reads two daily newspapers and three farm magazines, just as he did by the kerosene lamp which was put away this month.

Mother doesn't want to use the lamps again, unless there is a power outage. "That old kerosene lamp sure stinks," she said. "Put it back on the porch."

No rise expected in farmers' income

Washington (UPI) — American farmers will net about as much money this year as they did in 1975, whereas their income had been expected to increase by about $2 billion, the Agriculture Department reported Wednesday.

For consumers, the news was better: the department stood by earlier forecasts that retail food prices for the year as a whole will average only 3% higher than during the previous 12 months. The food inflation rate for 1975 was 8.5%.

Department analysts said the main reason net farm income failed to live up to expectations was a surge in livestock supplies resulting in lower prices for cattle and hogs.

This more than offset an unexpectedly big increase in late-season prices for crops.

While the report gave no exact figures, experts said the income outlook for the last half of this year "is not as strong as expected earlier" and the net for the year will be "around 1975 levels."

Department economist Terry

Barr said this means a net of about $22.7 billion compared to the August estimate of roughly $25 billion.

That still would tie 1976 for the third highest farm income on record, exceeded only by the levels in 1973 and 1974.

In the retail food section of the report, experts said they expected inflation to run no more than 2 to 4% during the first half of next year — provided there is little change in meat supplies and domestic demand.

Consumers should encounter only small food price increases this winter, concentrated mainly in fresh produce and coffee, the experts said, although by spring "prices may increase a little more rapidly if beef production is cut back as expected and fresh produce prices strengthen seasonally."

In another section of the report, officials said foreign demand for American grain will remain strong. But they said world production is up 5 to 6%, and this may bring a drop in U.S. grain exports of about 5%.

Airport burglary suspects find police instead of loot

New York (AP) — Three alleged burglars thinking they were on the way to an $80-million caper, walked into the arms of waiting police at a cargo terminal at Kennedy Airport early Wednesday morning.

But at least three more members of the burglary team got away when police sprang their trap early.

The nearly two dozen police officers waiting at the cargo hangar had been wise to the plot for three months.

And while the cupboard — the vault at the Swissair cargo terminal — was not exactly bare, neither was it as well-stocked as expected.

"It's not $80 million or anywhere near it. It could've been, but it wasn't," said a Swissair spokesman, adding that cash, gold and jewelry stored at a vault for shipment sometimes reaches that level.

"According to a source in the prosecutor's office, 'over $10 million would be in the ballpark.'"

The arrested men, held without bail, were identified as Michael Belvedere, 47, of Glendale, Queens; Cosmo Mazzapella, 52, of Brooklyn, and Ralph Leichtwies, 47, of Manhattan.

Snow is up to foot deep

United Press International
The season's first major snowstorm left up to a foot of snow Wednesday on the Rockies and central plains, off-the-lake snow squalls hit Chicago and Milwaukee, and harsh cold settled over the extreme northern Midwest.

The winter-like blast slowed thousands of travelers.
A foot of snow belted sections of the high Colorado Rockies and up to 11 inches fell in a band across western Kansas. Western Nebraska got lesser amounts, and the snow spread southward into New Mexico and the Oklahoma and Texas Panhandles.

The snowfall was blamed at least in part for a two-truck collision that killed one person and injured three on a Kansas highway.

Ranchers and wheat farmers on the high plains of Kansas and eastern Colorado welcomed the snow, described as the second earliest snowfall on record in southwestern Kansas.

"No doubt about it — this was a good storm for farmers in Colorado," said Erwyn Witte, spokesman for the Colorado Agriculture Department. "This is great."

Low temperature records tumbled from the Dakotas to New York state. The nation's official low was 11 above at Hibbing, Minn. Unofficially at Mercur, Minn., and the nearby River forestry office.

Strike date set for Chrysler

Detroit (UPI) — The United Auto Workers Wednesday said it will strike the Chrysler Corp. if there is no agreement on a new contract for the firm's 118,000 U.S. and Canadian auto workers by 6 p.m. Nov. 5.

"There will be no extension," UAW Vice President Douglas A. Fraser said. "We will either have a strike or the settlement."

Chrysler is the second company to be picked by the union to come to terms on a new contract in contract talks that began in mid-July. The industry's basic pact was reached during a 28-day strike against the Ford Motor Co.

The union has never had to strike either the second or third firms in the industry after it has struck the "prime target" to get the pattern agreement. Chrysler was first in line in 1973 and was hit by a nine-day strike.

UAW President Leonard Woodcock said no decision will be made on General Motors Corp. until the Chrysler deadline and a 10 a.m. Nov. 3 time limit on a new contract for 14,000 Ford of Canada workers is passed. He said one reason for leaving GM until last is its sheer size with 390,000 workers.

The negotiations resumed at Chrysler on Oct. 15 after being recessed in late August while the union concentrated on Ford. The No. 3 automaker this week reported a record $76.2 million third quarter profit, but Fraser said it was not a factor in choosing Chrysler despite his pleasure with its "affluence."

GM reports record third quarter

Detroit (AP) — General Motors turned in a record-shattering performance during the third quarter with net profits of $397 million on $10.2 billion in sales, the world's largest automaker reported Wednesday.

The company's profits for the July-September period, equal to $1.37 per share, were up 63 per cent from $243 million earned in the same quarter in 1975 and topped its previous third-quarter record of $267 million set in 1973.

Worldwide dollar sales in the period were up from the previous record $8.3 billion a year ago. GM, which now has set earnings marks for two straight quarters, reported profits in the first nine months of the year were a record $2.11 billion, three times the $635 million earned during the same 1975 span. Sales of $34.1 billion also were a record, up from $25.2 billion in 1975.

U.S. to boost fighter force in Europe

Washington (AP) — Reacting to a Soviet airpower buildup, the Pentagon announced Wednesday a major increase in U.S. fighter plane strength in Western Europe including the first overseas deployment of the new super-sonic F15.

Starting early next year, the Air Force will boost its strength in the NATO area by a net of 84 fighters when it sends F15s to West Germany and additional swing wing-wing F111s to Britain.

This will be the first significant increase in U.S. airpower in Europe in about nine years. The Air Force withdrew four squadrons totaling 96 F4 Phantom jets back to the United States in the spring of 1968.

A Pentagon spokesman said the new action has no connection with the presidential election campaign. He said it has been in the works for months.

The announcement said the deployments of F15s and additional F111s are particularly important in light of recent improvements in Warsaw Pact forces facing NATO.

The reinforcements will bring U.S. Air Force fighter plane strength in Europe to nearly 550 aircraft.

According to Pentagon calculations, this will leave total NATO tactical airpower only half as great as the roughly 5,000 warplanes arrayed by the Soviet Union and its Communist allies in central and Eastern Europe.

Apart from the numerical advantage enjoyed by the Communist bloc air forces, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld has said that Warsaw Pact tactical warplanes facing NATO are the more sophisticated and militarily more capable systems that have emerged since the late 1960s.

Among these newer Soviet fighters that have appeared in central and Eastern Europe are the advanced MIG23 floggers, which have a speed comparable to the F15 but whose weapons are rated by U.S. intelligence expert as less potent.

The Pentagon said deployment of the F15, armed with two kinds of conventional missiles and a six-barreled cannon, would provide NATO with an air defense capability superior to that of the most modern Warsaw Pact aircraft.

Additional nuclear-capable F111s will be available, allied adverse weather and low-level penetration capabilities, to include interdiction of Soviet supply and troop movement routes and close air support of allied ground forces, the announcement said.

A total of 72 newly manufactured F15s will be stationed in West Germany while 84 additional F111s will be posted in Britain.

Meanwhile, the Air Force will return 72 aging F4s from Europe to the United States. These fighters will be assigned to Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada while F111s will be shifted from Nellis to Mountain Home Air Force Base, Idaho, to replace other F111s sent to Britain.

The shifts will increase U.S. military manpower in Europe by nearly 3,000 men, to a new total of about 305,000.

Soviets cut budget but 'strengthen' defenses

Moscow (UPI) — The Soviet Union announced a reduced budget for military spending Wednesday but warned it is strengthening its defenses.

Finance Minister Vassily Garbuzov, addressing the Supreme Soviet, said the 1977 defense budget was $22.3 billion against $22.6 billion in 1975 and 1976.

Despite the decrease, Garbuzov said, "at the same time, the Soviet Union cannot ignore the machinations of the aggressive forces of imperialism which hamper the normal development of international relations and is compelled in these conditions to strengthen its defenses."

Garbuzov said the defense figure represented 7.2% of the overall budget of $301.1 billion.

Western experts cautioned that the defense spending figure is rarely taken seriously by Western nations since the Soviet Union is believed to disguise military spending under other budgetary headings.

Garbuzov's remarks echoed those of Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev who recently said the U.S.S.R. was "perfecting" its defenses.

In an interview with French television Oct. 5, the Soviet leader said, "We have to perfect our defenses, have to, I repeat, since we are faced with the arms race."

Demanding an end to arms escalation, Brezhnev said while the Soviet forces were impressive, "we declare clearly the Soviet Union is threatening nobody."

Vice Premier Nikolai K. Baibakov outlined a "tough but realistic" economic five-year plan but conceded that by 1980 it will still trail U.S. 1975 production levels in certain areas.

He said the Soviet Union by 1980 will have a national income of 85% of the U.S. income figure of 1975. Its agricultural output will be the same as the United States' 1975 output and industrial production will have exceeded the American 1975 figure by 9%.

Chinese criticize Soviet activity in southern Africa

Hong Kong (UPI) — China accused the Soviet Union Wednesday of trying to provoke armed struggle in southern Africa to foil U.S. diplomacy and control black African liberation movements.

The Soviets came under attack in a commentary by the official New China News Agency and a speech delivered by Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-Hua. Both related to Soviet activities in Africa.

The commentary said the Kremlin had opposed "wars of national liberation" for years but "has suddenly changed its usual theme and begun to lecture stridently (to) the south African countries (on) the need to wage a 'war of national liberation.'"

This is designed "to foil the U.S. 'shuttle diplomacy,'" the commentary said. "For this purpose, it ostensibly put forward a counter-measure of 'solution by armed struggle.' Its purpose is by no means to give real support to the armed struggle of the southern African people but to have a hand in and control the liberation armed forces in southern Africa."

In a speech that was transmitted by the New China News Agency Wednesday, Chiao criticized both the United States and the Soviet Union for their "rivalry over Africa."

"Especially vicious is the behavior of that super-power which styles itself the 'natural ally' of the Third World," Chiao said. "Flaunting the banner of support for the national liberation movements, it is trying in every way to undermine the just struggle of the people in southern Africa."

Lancaster County issues

Lancaster County Commissioner Jan Gauger won a narrow Republican primary election victory last spring in her bid for a second term. She and a well-organized team of volunteers are campaigning hard to win the general election — campaigning “as if we were coming from behind,” she says, although Mrs. Gauger is considered the favorite in this election year’s only contested county race.

Mrs. Gauger’s narrow escape in the spring and the necessity to campaign hard in the fall are attributable, we think, to the fact that during her first term she shook up the dust that had been accumulating over county government affairs for years and helped start a growing transformation of county government into a modern mechanism. The old ways die hard, however, and movement for change is bound to bring resentment.

The commissioner manages to stir up animosity and controversy in certain quarters no matter what she does, it seems. Much of that is pure politics and pettiness on the part of others, but Mrs. Gauger is not completely blameless. Perhaps if she is successful Nov. 2, a resolve to try to establish better working relationships with some of her antagonists in the courthouse will be high on a second term agenda.

Nevertheless, Mrs. Gauger has been an outstanding public official. She is a skillful legislator-administrator with an understanding of government problems and what to do about them.

Her opponent, Democratic nominee Ted Kossack, as a county employee knows something about county government, too.

He is also said to enjoy considerable support among fellow workers.

But Mrs. Gauger’s record has been superb, in our opinion, and notwithstanding a worthy challenge from Kossack, there are no good, hard reasons to replace her. The Star believes Lancaster County residents would profit from Mrs. Gauger’s re-election.

A proposition to increase the size of the county board from three to five members will also be on the Nov. 2 ballot, in Lancaster County.

The issue springs, in our opinion, from the running feud between the board and certain other elected county officials.

When the population of the county reaches 200,000, automatic redistricting will add two commissioners, for a total of five. But that is some years off.

The Star believes that there is no justification for ballooning the size of the board at present. The proposal in question is unnecessary, unwise, politically conceived and a waste of money. The idea should be rejected at the polls.

County residents can take satisfaction in a strong judicial bench.

Four District Court judges, William D. Blue, Dale Fahrbruch, Herbert A. Ronin and Samuel Van Pelt, and County Court Judge Jeffrey P. Chevront, all seek another six-year term under the merit system.

A majority of affirmative votes will retain a judge. The Star believes all five local judges worthy of retention and recommends a YES vote in each case.

A transbasin first

At first glance, it would seem a relatively easy thing to do—take excess water in the winter out of the Platte River and move it southeast into a man-made lake on the Little Blue. In the summer, the water in the lake could then be used to irrigate 65,000 acres of now dry land cropping areas in six surrounding counties.

While it may be a good idea, it would not be any easy thing to accomplish. But it is a proposal of the Little Blue Natural Resources District and a preliminary study of the project has already been completed.

Two vital matters are apparent at the very beginning. One, the project would cost an estimated $81 million and that would make the cost of irrigation water to farmers higher than would be feasible for them.

Two, the project calls for the movement of water from one drainage basin into another, a violation of existing state law. While there has been frequent talk of changing that law, such a change is not likely to be made without controversy and delay.

Then, all of this says nothing about the acceptance of the plan on the part of all interests involved and a final determination of any environmental impact.

Thus, the project is obviously only in its infancy. It merits comment, however, because the water of the state is the most precious resource Nebraska has and this project injects a new element into the use of that resource.

The transfer of water from one basin to another is surely a concept that Nebraska ought to buy. There is no sense, for instance, in letting the Platte River water simply flow out of the state if it can be effectively harnessed for productive use in another watershed.

The mere movement of that water into another basin should not in itself be sufficient grounds for denial of the Little Blue program. At the least, this project may serve to bring before the Legislature the question of such movement of the state’s water.

We are not talking about water transfer on an indiscriminate basis, but rather, studied and planned transfers that make the maximum use of this resource without offsetting liabilities. There should be a way to accomplish this.

Patchwork prairie country

By LA VERNA HASSLER

In the past I have read a number of books set in the Appalachian Mountains or the Ozarks of Missouri. Always there was mention of a holler. Someone always lived near a certain holler or over the mountain in another holler. So what is a holler? I had an idea.

It happened that a very delightful lady was on the bus tour we recently took who was from the Ozark mountains.

One day I asked her just what a “holler” is.

In her typical southern Ozark accent she asked, “You-all mean you don’t know what a holler is?”

In my typical midwest accent I answered, “No,” whereupon she began a very hilarious description.

“You-all know what a ditch is?” she asked.

In my midwest accent I replied, “Yes.”

Again, “Yes.”

Within a few minutes she turned in her seat as we curved and slanted around the mountains and pointed outside the mountain, “Now, there is a holler.”

A deep-cut gully winding its way up into the trees and mountain was visible. The leaves and pine needles had padded the winding curve for some distance, then it broke into a deeper crevice.

It was then I discovered I had been looking at hollers all along the roadway. Some are wider than others and some have names given to them by the mountain people. A cabin is often built near a holler and the directions for finding the homes of the mountain people are given according to the holler near which the family lives.

Before the tour was over she found a travel folder telling all about Possum Holler. She was not familiar with the holler but it certainly gave an accurate description of the people, culture, folklore and crafts of the mountain people.

Now I am more curious than ever to take a trip into these areas to learn and see these places.

“You-all come to Missouri,” she said. “It’s just a holler and a holler from where you all live. I’ll show you some real hollers.”

While waiting for The Farmer to come in for supper last night, I began thinking of baking rolls and bread once more. The thought of the oven heating the kitchen with a warm toastiness and the cinnamon scent that drifts throughout the kitchen somehow sparked a new enthusiasm. Somehow I lose this eagerness during the heat of summer’s long days — the “cooking blahs”, I call it.

I thumbed through several cookbooks looking for a new recipe. I had the time since The Farmer does not get in from the field until nine o’clock. The hours from six until nine are long.

Looking through cookbooks is a wonderful pastime. If I only look, I can delve into a hearty meal without counting calories. That is rich compensation, as it now stands.

However, the recipes I have laid aside for future baking will be cozy good and already I can hear myself saying, “Please pass the cinnamon rolls again. It must be the raisins that make them so delicious!”

There are plenty of differences

THE MAN WHO ELECTED NIXON TWICE AND MAY DECIDE THE '76 RACE

main targets — from Ford’s early demand for a tax increase and his WIN (Whip Inflation Now) program. Unemployment has sharply increased. Carter would make jobs his first priority. He would find tax reform harder than he has suggested, and less productive of new revenue, but he plainly offers a much greater chance to remove some of the more grotesque injustices and loopholes from the tax code.

ENVIRONMENT: As in his economic approach, Ford has been oriented to the business community’s desires. A striking example was the long attempt to weaken or block the Toxic Substances Bill, controlling the introduction of deadly chemicals into our surroundings, which the President finally signed under election pressure. Similarly, he cut spending on conservation and parks but proposed new parks in the campaign. Carter was universally rated strong and independent on environmental issues as governor of Georgia; he would be more likely to resist efforts to weaken protections.

ENERGY: In the Ford years American dependence on Arab oil has sharply increased. The administration has done little for conservation, instead pushed for quick development of new domestic energy sources such as offshore oil and nuclear power. Carter would put greater emphasis on conservation and would be especially cautious in nuclear development.

HEALTH: A critical fact of contemporary American life is the zooming cost of medical care, spurred in good part by federal programs that enrich a few but do not assure care for the many. Ford first said he was for a national insurance plan, then dropped the subject. The obstacles to such a plan in this large country should not be underestimated, but Carter’s strong support would be much more likely to get action in Congress.

AMNESTY: If Carter is elected, all Vietnam draft resisters will be pardoned at the end of January 1977, and allowed to come home. If Ford wins, they will remain fugitives.

In foreign affairs, the two men are broadly in agreement on the established American policies of alliance and detente. But there are differences.

ARMS: Carter would take a more skeptical look at proposed new weapons system such as the B1 bomber, which Ford in California said it would be “an economic tragedy” to abandon. Carter has also called for limits on the sales of American arms abroad, which have mushroomed during the Nixon-Ford administrations.

MILITARY ADVENTURES: Ford has the compelling argument that the country is at peace. On the other hand, only Congress kept him from feeding a last-minute $1 billion into the Vietnam war and involving the United States in Angola’s civil war; and he said mysteriously in the last debate that Gen. George Brown’s leadership qualities might be needed for “operations” in “southern Africa.” Carter is untested but has said: “I would never go to war in another country unless our own security were threatened.”

TYRANNY: The United States has become increasingly identified with totalitarian regimes — in Greece, Chile, South Korea and elsewhere. Ford said he saw nothing wrong with U.S. actions in Chile, and he has fought congressional efforts to condition aid on an end to torture of political prisoners. How to deal with tyrannies is not an easy problem, but from his early primary days Carter has called for America to voice its ideals abroad and stand for human rights.

The result of this election will make real differences: To human beings, here and abroad. To pretend that there is no difference is to treat the American system — and treat ourselves — with contempt.

Beware the huckstering ads

James Reston

NEW YORK—A great change has come over the candidates in the last week of the campaign. The magical theatrical arts of Times Square and the cunning techniques of Madison Avenue, with just the right camera angles, voice levels and patriotic crowd shots, have suddenly transformed President Ford and Jimmy Carter into flawless statesmen.

The television blitz is on, and it is exactly like the commercial advertising campaign for the 1977 automobiles. “Now that’s better,” say the General Motors and Carter ads. “When America needs a better idea, Ford puts it on wheels,” says the Ford Motor Co. And the Republicans say the same, even though Jerry usually puts every better idea on the shelf.

It is only when you watch the parties and the candidates selling their products over TV — Joe Garagiola peddling Ford precisely as he peddled Dodge — that you begin to appreciate the good side of all those tiresome primary elections, repetitive speeches, blundering press conferences and controversial debates.

They were excessively punishing on Ford and Carter and their families, but at least they gave the voters a more accurate impression of the two men than their contrived acceptance speeches at the nominating conventions, or these heroic TV pictures of Jimmy on the fence or the President mouthing patriotic lines to a circle of adoring black and white children.

Almost everybody is sneering at the long campaign as a tiresome bore, knocking the debates as a scoreless tie, and dismissing the two candidates as a couple of unsatisfactory dubs, but herewith a dissent before the final expensive political pictures on the television screens.

The campaign has been a long marathon, and thank God it’s almost over, but along the way, it eliminated the primaries Gov. Wallace and Gov. Reagan, the two men who might have carried the nation away from its moderate course in both national and foreign policy.

It gave the rejected South a chance in 1976, as it gave the rejected Roman Catholics a chance with Kennedy in 1960 to get to the pinnacle of political responsibility. In short, the system made room for the political outsiders this year, as it did with Willie in 1940, and Eisenhower in 1952.

Also, it dramatized at least some of the lessons of Watergate, and under the new campaign finance laws, was probably more honest financially than any other presidential election of modern times.

Finally, it compelled Ford and Carter to make decisions about the vice presidency, which has succeeded, by accident, to the presidency under Theodore Roosevelt, Calvin Coolidge, Harry Truman, Lyndon Johnson, and Gerald Ford in this century, and has given us such nominees as Spiro Agnew, and Bob Dole and Walter Mondale to think about as potential presidents. You can take your choice.

So maybe the ’76 campaign has not been all that bad. It showed us that the Republican Party, which had doubts about nominating Gerald Ford for senator or governor of Michigan, let alone for the presidency, even fought him down to the last ballot at Kansas City for the presidential nomination.

It showed us that the presiding elders of the Democratic Party, including their labor leaders, didn’t want Carter, but accepted him when he won the primaries.

It also showed us that, under pressure, both candidates make mistakes and that press, radio and television magnify these mistakes, and confront them with dilemmas of the democratic process almost beyond endurance. But in that process, or so it seems here, they staggered along and deserve better marks than they have been given by a critical press that fails on fumbles, and by a critical electorate that condemns Ford statements it doesn’t understand and Carter Playboy interviews it never reads.

Okay, so the campaign was not an educational exercise on the issues, and the speeches were repetitive dozers, but if Carter staggers into “ethnic purity” or Playboy mistakes, and Ford thinks he is in Ohio when he is in Iowa, and liberates Eastern Europe by accident, or stumbles down an airplane stairway, maybe that’s the way they are — a little imprecise, a little clumsy or inexperienced, and maybe after months and months of campaigning, probably a little exhausted, confused and even punchy.

After it’s all over, I don’t happen to think it’s a hard call. Carter’s intelligence, energy, flexibility, his understanding of the young and his capacity for personal growth are so much greater than Ford’s that the decision for Carter seems clear in this corner and cannot be blamed on the campaign.

Voters can choose as they like — between the possibility and uncertainty of change under Carter or the certainty of “Four more years” of much the same under Ford, but they cannot take guidance from the fraudulent blitz at the end. The campaign has been fairly accurate in revealing the qualities and weaknesses of both candidates, and is a much better guide than all the huckstering ads we will be seeing from now until next Tuesday.

Do they know Ford?

Harris poll

Lincoln, Neb.
The Harris poll shows the college educated have shifted to Ford because they do not know what kind of man Jimmy Carter is. Do they know Gerald Ford who never fails to tell what he has accomplished?

He has had two years to show us and we still have recession, thousands of people know what unemployment is and I know about inflation, because I do the shopping.

I don’t think for a moment that Carter does not know what is going on. He showed that in the debates. The President won’t even give his critics a straight answer.

One thing he did, though. He pardoned an educated man who brought this country to the brink of disaster. An outrageous accomplishment! Is that integrity or opportunism? Do we want four more years to find out?

AFRAID TO FIND OUT.

Crete, Neb.
Many eligible voters are saying they do not intend to vote since whether they vote for Jimmy or Jerry they believe they’ll still have more inflation, higher taxes, and more government control of their lives. Based on Jerry’s performance and Jimmy’s promises, this fear is well justified.

The tragedy is that the national and some local news media have blacked out the candidacy of Lester Maddox, who is also on the ballot and is the only other candidate that gives the voters a clear choice.

Maddox calls for a stop to runaway government spending, support for free enterprise and support for labor, controlling criminals instead of citizen’s guns, ending forced busing, stopping abortions, cutting foreign aid, supporting our national defense, and the immediate firing of Henry Kissinger.

Some say a vote for Lester would take a vote for Ford. We say a vote for Ford or a vote for Jimmy is a vote for more of what we already have too much of. We have a two party system alright and the Republican Democrats is one of them.

A vote for Lester Maddox is a vote for a return to Constitutional government, responsibility, and sanity. Think about it!

SARA BROOKS

Lexington, Neb.
Some time ago, a Mr. Friebe of McCook had a letter published in the North Platte Telegraph exhorting the farmers to vote for Carter for president, saying he had lost a fortune in the last two years because of low wheat prices. He also said he would like to go back to the program of government control which we had under the Democrats.

First, if Mr. Friebe lost a fortune, where did he get it? I’ll bet he didn’t squabble when he got four to five dollars for his wheat. As to the program for wheat as was written in 1938, it was a program of acreage control and one of the most unequitable and unfair programs ever forced on any segment of our economy. First, you don’t sell wheat by the acre but by the bushel. If they were sincere in cutting production, it should have been a certain number of bushels per farm based on the number of acres under cultivation on that farm. The way it was operated, it made liars out of people who wouldn’t lie about anything else. I farmed under that program and I certainly don’t want to go back to it.

Today’s Mail

There is something more involved in this election. Mr. Carter compares the unemployment rate under Kennedy and Johnson to the present rate but he neglects to tell the people why. The young men from 18 to 30 were being drafted into the Army and sent to Vietnam where 300 per month were killed and two or three times that many were wounded. Many were hopelessly crippled for life.

Mr. Carter could have gone back to Wilson in 1917, to Mr. Roosevelt in 1941, to Mr. Truman in 1948, to Mr. Kennedy and Johnson in 1961 to 1969. These were all started under a Congress controlled by the Democrats, so the blame or credit has to lie at the door of the Democratic Party. We are at peace today under Mr. Ford, a Republican president even if he is being given a bad time by an overwhelmingly Democratic Congress.

The programs instituted under the Democrats of the past 40 years are now showing up in the budget of today. It took 173 years for the U.S. to get the first $100 billion budget or, rather, to spend $100 billion, then just nine years later to spend $200 billion, then only four years later, $300 billion, and only one year to spend $400 billion.

If Carter is elected and the spending program in the Democratic program is written into law — where to? We haven’t seen anything yet.

ROBERT JOHNSON

Broken Bow, Neb.
I agree with “Concerned” from Fremont, whose letter was published in the Oct. 16 Star. I would say that those of us in our 70’s can well remember “He-kept-us-out-of-war” Wilson, as well as “I-will-never-send-your-boys-to-fight-on-foreign-soil” Roosevelt. And it is my studied opinion that if “Give-em-hell” Truman had not recalled General MacArthur when he did, the capable MacArthur would have handled the situation so well that the Asian trouble would never have developed.

Historically the Democratic party has been involved in war. The Republican administrations have had to pay for it. Of course we went through hard times. MRS. FRANK J. HAUMONT

Philly water rates 'stinko'

Philadelphia (AP) — The results of the Great Philadelphia-Suburban Water Taste Test are in. The city's water doesn't cut the ice.

The bitter truth has been spoken by seven judges, summoned to determine if the water is fit for the suburbs.

"Wouldn't wash my dog with it," said one of the taste testers.

The judges agreed the "stinko" rating was due mostly to the chlorine odor that permeates the water.

The test got started when a suburban county was thinking of piping in Philadelphia water. But the city water was criticized by residents so The Philadelphia Inquirer agreed to sponsor a test to see if the water was really as bad as the suburbanites said.

The judges brought water from their own homes — some from the city, most from surrounding areas — and compared it with water from two city treatment plants. The water was put into coded plastic cups then drunk and judged.

The city water took last and next to last place.

Mark Schireson passes judgment on a sample of water.

Vitamin C not 'significant' cold remedy

Boston (AP) — Researchers who said two years ago Vitamin C might relieve the common cold now conclude the drug does not significantly ease symptoms of the sniffles.

The team of doctors, among the first to confirm the relieving powers of the vitamin, say now their earlier assertions were wrong.

"We do not believe that Vitamin C has widespread usefulness as a cold remedy," the doctors concluded.

The new study was directed by Dr. John F. Coulehan at the University of Pittsburgh Medical School. It is reported in an issue of the New England Journal of Medicine Thursday.

The virtues of Vitamin C have been debated since Nobel laureate Linus Pauling said in 1970 people who took large daily doses of the drug would have fewer colds. He also said the colds they did get would be less severe.

To test that theory, Coulehan and his associates experimented with students at a Navajo boarding school in Arizona. They concluded in 1974 that students who took Vitamin C had milder colds.

"Our study got a lot of publicity and was used to argue that Vitamin C was beneficial," Coulehan said in an interview. "Because of this, we went into a second study that was longer and more controlled."

The second time, the doctors said they watched the health of 888 Navajo children at schools in Steamboat and Lower Greasewood, Ariz. Half took Vitamin C and the rest got fake pills. Over five months, the number and length of colds were almost identical between the two groups, the doctors said.

"Our important finding was negative," Coulehan said. "We were unable to demonstrate significant benefits of Vitamin C."

Coulehan noted some other researchers are still reporting mild benefits to cold victims from Vitamin C. He said scientists theorize that in some cases the vitamin has an effect on the body similar to an antihistamine.

Last escaped lion shot

Ringgold, Ga. (UPI) — The last of seven lions which escaped from a private zoo was killed Wednesday as it charged a member of a posse hunting the lions for two days in the North Georgia Mountains.

Catoosa County Investigator Jerry Reed said an unidentified volunteer searcher shot the 400-pound lioness when she charged him as he walked along a dirt road about 150 yards from the cage which the lions fled Monday night.

"It was about 150 yards from where it originally broke out," said a sheriff's deputy. "One individual discovered it. It came out of a ditch charging him, and he had no choice, he had to kill it. The dart gun was back up the hill."

About 14 policemen, volunteers and game wardens joined in the search in two counties, using horses for speed and better visibility above the brush.

Linda Keown, wife of the private zoo owner Vernon Keown, said someone apparently let the seven cats, one male and six lionesses, out of their cage Monday.

Wife beaters get vote back

Birmingham, Ala. (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that convicted wife beaters will be able to vote in next Tuesday's election. U.S. District Court Judge J. Guin's ruling came in a suit filed by Wayne T. Hobson.

Coroner: Ferryboat captain was nearly drunk

The Lincoln Star Thursday, 10/28/76 Page 7

New Orleans (AP) — The captain of a Mississippi River ferry packed with early morning commuters was "almost legally drunk" when his craft collided with a tanker, killing an estimated 100 persons, a coroner said Wednesday.

"This ferryboat captain had been drinking," said New Orleans Coroner Frank Minyard. "He was almost legally drunk, and this, coupled with the fact that he was at the end of his shift — the drinking and the fatigue — in my judgment, impaired his judgment and ability to handle his vessel."

Minyard said the autopsy on Capt. Egidio Auletta, completed Wednesday, showed a blood alcohol content of .09 per cent. "That is just a tad under 0.1 . . . which is the legal definition of being drunk in the State of Louisiana," he said.

The ferry George Prince and the Norwegian tanker Frosta collided at dawn last Wednesday as the smaller craft made the 10-minute crossing from Destrehan to Luling, about 20 miles up-river from New Orleans.

Divers have recovered 71 bodies and 34 vehicles from the river so far. Officials have compiled a list of 27 other persons believed still missing, although they acknowledge there is no way to tell how many were actually aboard at the time of the accident.

Eighteen persons survived the accident. Some officials said after the mishap the captain's body was not found on the bridge. He was the only licensed pilot known to be aboard.

"There is no way to tell how much the alcohol impaired the captain's ability," said a spokesman in the coroner's office. "No way to tell whether it was 10% or 40%. He was a young man, weighed about 200 pounds and that would have had an effect. . . . But Dr. Minyard felt that his reflexes were slowed down."

Rear Adm. Wayne Caldwell, presiding at the inquiry, told reporters the hearing tends to show tighter enforcement of safety regulations is needed — but added that it would hardly be practical to put a man on every ferry to make sure no crewmen were drinking on duty.

The ferry captain was 35. Kenneth Becnel, one of the 18 survivors of the accident, was testifying before the Coast Guard when the report was received.

Becnel, a welder trainee and a regular rider, said he had seen some previous close calls on the ferry. He cited one about a month ago when, he said, the ferry came close to two tugs.

He said that as the two ships drew dangerously close, he heard the tanker sound two sets of warning signals "loud and clear." He said he looked up at the pilothouse of the ferry and there was no response.

When the ship struck, Becnel said he was pinned between two cars, but they slipped apart as water rolled up onto the deck, and he was freed. He said the next thing he knew, he was under water.

The ferry capsized and dumped all the cars overboard. It lay half submerged.

Becnel said he swam around until he saw the ferry. He swam to it and climbed aboard with other survivors.

Mayor bows to demand, moves Halloween date

Memphis, Tenn. (UPI) — Mayor W. R. Chandler says the Great Pumpkin and public opinion have helped him in his decision to celebrate Halloween on Saturday.

Chandler said his office received more phone calls requesting the celebration be moved from its traditional date of Oct. 31, a Sunday this year, to Saturday, than about any other issue since he has been in office. "The Great Pumpkin having descended upon me in large volume, I'm asking you to join with me and declare this Saturday as Halloween," Chandler said to the City Council.

F14 sinks in storm, missile search continues

London (AP) — The U.S. Navy's sunken F14 fighter plane fell back to the bottom Wednesday as bad weather wrecked a bid to raise it; the Navy reported. It added a search team was still looking for the plane's secret Phoenix missile on the bed of the North Sea off Scotland. "A lift line which had been secured to the F14 Tuesday failed in high seas and the aircraft sank to the bottom," a Navy spokesman said. "We don't know where the Phoenix missile is."

Gauger, Kossack battling door to door

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

Campaign '76

Wherever his truck stops, Ted Kossack, Democratic candidate for Lancaster County commissioner, gets out and shakes a few hands.

For the past few weeks the 18-year county employee has been waging a 13-hour daily person-to-person campaign in his uphill fight to unseat Republican incumbent Jan Gauger.

And Mrs. Gauger, with a highly organized campaign and 400 volunteers, is also taking her campaign door to door in the final weeks before the Nov. 2 election.

In a race devoid of any major issues, both candidates agree that personal contact and name recognition are important campaign ingredients.

Four years ago when Mrs. Gauger won her first term, she ran an aggressive, issue-oriented campaign stressing modern management techniques and accountability in government.

"Essentially I ran against the old County Board," she says.

But the County Board has changed and this year she is stressing those things she has accomplished in office — merger of purchasing and personnel with the city, better budget information. She is asking for another term to see these improvements through to completion.

Kossack is hammering away at the increase in costs some of these new programs have brought to county government. He points to the high costs for administrative assistants to do what Kossack feels the part-time

Jan Gauger
... defending record.

Ted Kossack
... in an uphill fight.

commissioners should do for themselves.

Kossack says he can and will weed out excessive spending without destroying some of the progressive programs and improvements in county government.

Mrs. Gauger counters that staff is needed to carry out good budgeting and staff costs money.

When she took office the more than 35 county budgets came to the board in a variety of forms. There was no standardization, and the board had no information on actual departmental spending until just before budget decisions had to be made.

This has changed. The commissioners now have standardized information to help them make the budgetary decisions which are a major part of their job, Mrs. Gauger says.

Kossack, who after a hard day of campaigning lists his age as 92 going on 93, says he is trying to get his name across and convince voters that he can do the job better than Mrs. Gauger.

Mrs. Gauger, who is sandwiching campaigning between her commissioner duties, is counting on her well organized staff.

Though few political observers doubt that Mrs. Gauger will win the election, she says she is working at it "as if we were coming from behind."

Advantages of five-member county board disputed

Campaign '76

The opponents have remained quiet, hoping that like a pesky horse fly, the issue will disappear with the cold weather.

The issue — on the Nov. 2 ballot — is whether Lancaster County should have a five-member County Board of Commissioners.

Currently Lancaster County has three commissioners, elected during the primary by district voters, then put on the county-wide ballot for the general election.

County commissioners in Nebraska have a double role — both administrative and legislative. They approve county departmental budgets, monitor spending by approving claims and exert some administrative control over other elected officials' departments through budgetary control.

They also control the administrative functions of all departments headed by appointed administrators and have some regulatory power in areas like zoning.

Those in favor of five, rather than three elected commissioners, contend that a larger number will give greater representation to voters, particularly to rural residents.

The elected officials, who initiated the five-commission ballot question, also say that a five-member County Board will eliminate the problem of one commissioner controlling board actions.

Historically one of the three board members has, because of personality or hard work, essentially controlled County Board decisions, long-time elected officials contend.

The elected officials have also said that the five-member board would strengthen county government, give more voice to the people and save tax funds by eliminating highly paid administrative assistants.

Five commissioners can do the necessary research themselves, so this rationale goes, and thus assistants could be eliminated.

Opponents of the five-commissioner proposal contend that more board members will only increase county costs.

Adding two more commissioners will not give rural residents better representation, opponents say. Because of the one man, one vote concept and the small number of rural residents it would take a 10 or 11 person board before rural residents would be able to elect their own representative.

Anderson questions endorsement of Thone

Democratic congressional nominee Pauline Anderson Wednesday asked the Federal Communications Commission and the Federal Election Commission to investigate the Nebraska Television Network's endorsement of Congressman Charles Thone.

NTV, headquartered in Kearney, editorially endorsed Thone earlier this week.

Its general manager, James Johnson, is a member of the Republican state central committee.

"We are requesting the FCC to determine whether the endorsement was actually an unpaid political broadcast and therefore an illegal corporate contribution to the Thone campaign," Mrs. Anderson said.

"And we asking the FEC if, in effect, the Nebraska Republican Party is making an illegal contribution through the NTV network."

Waldo skeptical of high salaries

Willard H. Waldo, 4th District candidate for University of Nebraska regent, said he questions whether university administrators must be paid as much as they are.

"The university must have a competent administration," Waldo said. "The question is whether we must pay glamorous salaries to get it."

Waldo also suggested that his opponent, incumbent Robert Prokop, is being supported by Omaha labor leaders and that he favors more high-priced construction on the University of Nebraska at Omaha campus.

Durand stresses compliance with rate orders

Joyce Durand, 1st District candidate for the Public Service Commission, said Wednesday a legislative report critical of the state's regulatory agency contained "findings which are precisely on point."

Mrs. Durand and state Sen. Harold Simpson, both of Lincoln, seek the seat currently held on the commission by Robert Marland of Lincoln.

"One major item in the report deals with requiring compliance with rate orders," said Mrs. Durand, analyzing the report's section dealing with telephone utility rates and service.

"I have repeatedly stated that if the PSC doesn't hold the companies down to the levels they are authorized to charge, then the commission has no reason to exist."

She said there is no point to the commission setting rate return levels if a phone firm then is allowed to earn that amount plus $100,000 or more.

Voter turnout may decide election

By Louis Harris
As Jimmy Carter clings to a narrow 45-42% lead in this final week of the campaign, the element of turnout—who will and will not vote—is emerging as perhaps the most critical dimension of this election. And the latest indicators now point to a lower, rather than higher, turnout.

Ever since early June, the Harris Survey has confined its samplings to the "likely voter" group, those six in every 10 adults who have voted regularly in the past, are registered and say they are certain to vote in this election. The latest Harris Survey, which included among the candidates Eugene McCarthy and Lester Maddox, interviewed 1,893 such likely voters. The number who said they were "certain to vote" dropped eight points over a 10-day period, from 89 to 81%. This is the lowest it has been in 1976.

There is no doubt whatsoever about which candidate has the highest stake in a bigger turnout: Carter. The heart of Carter's support is big city voters, among which he leads by 49-35%; young people: under 30, (48-39%); blacks, (74-6%); those with incomes of under $10,000, (51-32%). Yet it is precisely among big city voters, the young, blacks and low-income voters that turnout at the polls has slipped drastically in recent years.

By contrast, President Ford draws his main strength from those segments of the electorate that are most likely to come out to vote election after election. He is strongest in the suburbs, where he leads by 47-40%; among the college-educated, (48-39%); among the $15,000 and over income group, (52-38%); among professional people (48-41%); among executives, (57-30%).

Simply put, the bigger the vote, the better Carter's chances. The smaller the vote, the better Ford's chances.

By 47-29%, a plurality of the voters feel they can trust Gerald Ford more than Jimmy Carter in "not trying to be all things to all people." In August, a much closer 38-31% plurality gave Ford the edge on this key dimension.

In the end, Carter's credibility is the pivotal dimension of this election. As of October 19th and 20th, a razor-thin 42-41% plurality thought Jimmy Carter rather than Gerald Ford would more likely "inspire confidence personally in the White House." In early October, Carter held a more convincing 44-37% lead. In late August, he won the confidence test by 48-33% and in early August by 60-22%. If Carter cannot hold the lead in inspiring confidence, he will be hard-put to get his vote next Tuesday. And he can lose if the turnout at the polls is low.

New York welcomes Carter as hero

United Press International

New York gave Democrat Jimmy Carter a hero's welcome as tens of thousands poured into the streets to cheer him Wednesday but President Ford said he has the momentum going that will bring him a "Truman" upset victory election day.

With six days left, Ford and Carter shifted their nonstop campaigns to the populous east coast. Both were elated at the crowds who swarmed them in the final stage of their fight for the presidency.

Seeking the state's 41 electoral votes and hoping to nail down the backing of Catholics, liberals and labor, Carter received the biggest reception of his 22-month campaign as his motorcade rolled down Fifth Avenue and into garment center for a rally.

Police estimated that 10,000-15,000 lined Fifth Avenue as Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, standing in an open limousine moved 20 blocks down the parade route and another 60,000 to 70,000 crammed three blocks in the midtown garment center.

With genuine wonderment in his voice, Carter said, "this is an absolutely unbelievable outpouring of confidence."

New York reporters said it was the biggest presidential campaign rally since John F. Kennedy appeared there in the closing weeks of the 1960 campaign. Carter holds a nine-point edge in the state, according to the latest New York Daily News poll.

Ford was equally elated as he campaigned on Atlantic City's Boardwalk and in Philadelphia in sunny but chilly weather.

A crowd of about 1,500 crushed around Ford on the Boardwalk — about two dozen were pushed over the roped area — and the President shouted "Jerry loves Jersey and I mean it from the bottom of my heart."

"There are nine states where we are a point or two ahead of Carter or a point or two behind," Ford said. "They are the key to victory."

He ticked off the pivotal states as New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, home-state Michigan, Texas and California. The nine states have 241 electoral votes and it takes 270 to win.

Pollster George Gallup, whose first voter survey goes back to 1935, said that the last few weeks show that "a greater shift of opinion has been registered in the present race than in any in which we have ever been involved."

Addressing a luncheon in Washington, Gallup said the televised debates have renewed interest in the election and added "our survey data at this point would indicate it is helping President Ford."

Pollster Louis Harris, who also addressed the luncheon, said the election "is up for grabs."

Carter, who once held a 35 percentage point margin over Ford in the Harris survey, now has a three- to four-point edge. The Gallup Poll, which also showed Carter with a huge lead during the summer, currently places him six points ahead of Ford.

In Atlantic City, Ford said at the airport that "I think we've got lots of momentum" and compared his race to Harry S. Truman's upset over Thomas E. Dewey in 1948.

"This is the kind of momentum one of my idols, Harry S. Truman, a Democrat, had in his campaign," Ford said.

Asked for evidence of the momentum, Ford pointed to the "fantastic" crowds that greeted him in Chicago and elsewhere since he launched the final stage of his campaign last Saturday.

Although his voice was hoarse and he appeared tired after a long day which ended in Chicago Tuesday night, Carter was back on the stump in New York in the jammed streets of the garment center.

Mayor Abraham Beame, who met Carter at the airport, said the Democratic candidate had a "comfortable lead" for New York's prized 41 electoral votes. Beame said if independent candidate Eugene McCarthy is allowed on the ballot, Carter's "margin might be narrowed a little."

At the rally, Carter said, "Mr. Ford's attitude toward New York's financial problems is only the most visible aspect of the record of indifference to the fate of our cities."

"New York City must help itself — and has — but progress will be impossible without a close and productive partnership between the city, the state and the federal government," Carter said. "If I am elected, our cities will have an active and committed partner in the White House."

Wylie won't play 'game' if elected

If Ron Wylie is elected to Lincoln's 29th District Unicameral seat, he won't "be playing that Lincoln-Omaha game."

"Trade-off legislative deals and state construction scrambling have proved more costly to Nebraskans than any short-term benefit to Lincoln could justify," Wylie said in prepared remarks for a Wednesday address to the Gateway Sertoma Club.

Wylie, who is challenging Sen. Shirley Marsh's re-election bid, said he would fight in legislative construction financing for "the most logical spot — and, if that's Broken Bow, instead of Lincoln or Omaha, that's what we have to do."

"Mrs. Marsh's support of the Downtown Omaha Educational Center during the 1976 legislative session is a prime example of the stupid waste associated with Lincoln-Omaha benefits bargaining," he said.

Citing "general low-road politicking" in promoting the Omaha center, Wylie said Mrs. Marsh told him then it "was a bad idea. When it came time to vote, however, Mrs. Marsh made her deal with (former Sen.) Gene Mahoney (of Omaha) and voted in favor."

Despite the $5 million in private donations, "you and I are going to be shelling out $2-3 million a year in maintenance and programming costs as long as that building stands," he said.

Nebraska's limited population "can't afford political gamesmanship" in spending state money, Wylie said.

He urged Sertomans to judge him and Mrs. Marsh "on issues and abilities rather than on kinship recognition," a reference to her husband, State Treasurer Frank Marsh, who Wylie noted is a Sertoma member.

Wylie questioned "the propriety of having the wife of the state treasurer serve in the Unicameral at all," and criticized "her participation on the Legislature's Appropriations Committee."

Wylie also predicted that land and water issues will require that every legislator must become an expert on conservation and ag planning matters and assume statewide concern, because land and water use legislation affects all including urban areas.

Legislators' salary ranks 40th in U.S.

Nebraska legislators' pay ranks 40th among all states in annual salary and compensation lawmakers receive, according to former Sen. Ross Rasmussen.

He is among proponents of Amendment 8, a general election ballot proposition which would change the Nebraska Constitution to raise state senators' annual pay from $4,800 to $6,100.

In the rankings Rasmussen supplied, Nebraska lawmakers' annual pay and compensation is calculated at $5,000, while the average nationwide is $10,027.

California tops the list, at $38,450. The only Plains states in the top 20 are Minnesota, Oklahoma, Iowa and Missouri, in 14th, 16th, and 19th places, respectively. Their remuneration ranges from Minnesota's $11,947 to Missouri's $10,362.

The next Midwest state as the rankings descend is Colorado, its $7,600 making 31st place. Kansas is No. 32, at $7,125, followed next by Nebraska in 40th. Only the Dakotas and Wyoming pay less in the region than the Cornhusker state. New Hampshire is in 50th place, at $100 annually.

Ford caravan will tour state

A campaign caravan for President Ford will tour portions of Nebraska this weekend.

The caravan of Ford supporters will travel west from Lincoln to Gothenburg via Interstate 80, then back south through Holdrege and Hastings, completing the tour with stops at Fairbury and Beatrice.

Departures from Lincoln is scheduled for Friday, with final stops on Sunday.

Zorinsky plans local meetings

Democratic senatorial nominee Edward Zorinsky will campaign in Lincoln Thursday.

The Omaha mayor's stops include afternoon shift changes at American Stores and Cushman's, and handshaking visits with shoppers at Gateway Shopping Center.

Zorinsky will address Lancaster County Democrats at a noon luncheon at the Five O'Clock Club.

Union College's Peanut Hill sells no meat

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

In the days of tailored breeches and trolley cars, the summer heat would drive Lincolinites by the droves out to the cool shade of the Union College campus.

There they would listen to the community band, catch up on local gossip and munch on salted peanuts hawked by pint-size vendors.

Peanuts were an early protein substitute for those Adventists who adhered to the vegetarian diet. And the Adventist village of College View, where Lincolinites could buy these gopher peas or Adventist-invented treat of peanut butter, became known throughout the community as Peanut Hill.

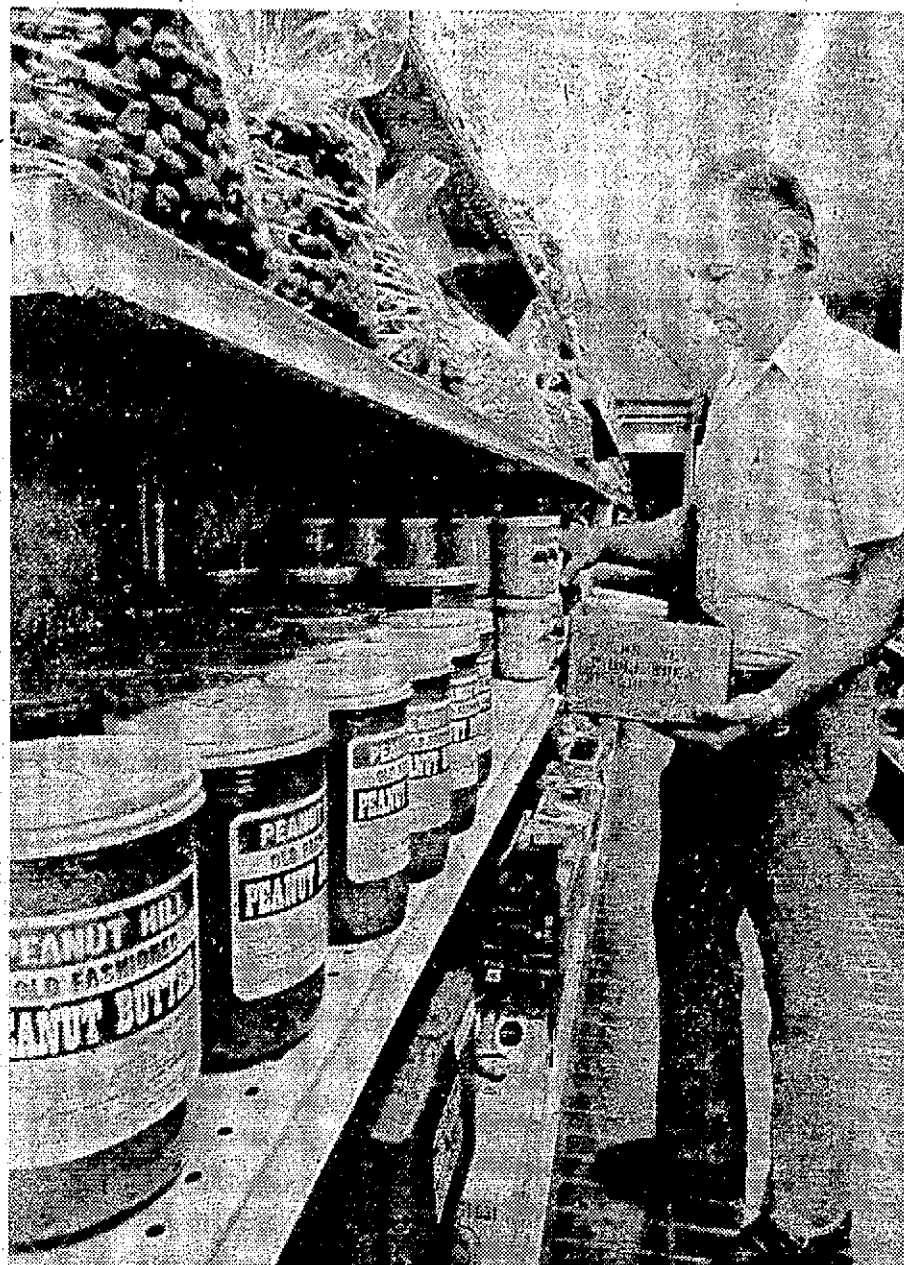

The Peanut Hill nickname stuck long after the breeches and trolley cars disappeared.

Now it is being rekindled as the official name of Union College's newest business — The Peanut Hill, a natural food market and bakery.

For nearly 50 years the small store at 3845 S. 48th was Kuehl's Market, a neighborhood grocery and convenience store. Now its new owner, Union College, is remodeling, restocking and converting the market into a specialty health food store.

The Peanut Hill, which should be open full-time by Thanksgiving, will carry baked goods from the Union College bakery, a variety of natural or health foods including flours, dried fruits, nuts and several lines of canned and frozen meat substitutes called protein analogues.

The merchandise will be strictly vegetarian — vegetarian crackers, vegetarian cookies, vegetarian cheese, said manager Robert McEndree.

Ron Bowes stocks shelves for Thanksgiving opening.

The store will serve the needs of the Adventist community and others interested in natural food products, plus provide some part-time employment for Union College students.

The college is hoping that the store will also help rekindle the disintegrating College View business district.

That old business district along S. 48th St. has been changing faces in the past few months. A $2 million remodeled Adventist church is taking shape at one corner; the Seventh Day Adventist Nebraska Conference has begun to remodel the outside of its building.

Some new services have moved into the area including a graphics art studio called Literature Production, and a family-oriented ceramics shop called House of Plaster. Pearl Vision Center is also planning a S. 48th St. store.

The college wanted to make its own positive contribution toward the business district. "We can't just live on our side of the street and not become involved," said Ron Bowes, college relations director.

The College View community always had a market, he said. "We see the store as a community service. We hope it doesn't lose money, but we don't see it as an endowment either."

The store's new name, engendered in a campus-wide contest, was suggested separately by two men — the store's new manager McEndree and Everett Dick, college historian.

The name did meet with some internal dissension, Bowes admits.

Non-Adventists have used the label Peanut Hill derisively, making fun of the Adventist religion and diet, said Bowes.

But Bowes intends to turn that derision to praise.

"Though some people have used it in a derogatory way, we think we can use it and point to it with some pride," said Bowes.

Wife wants dual telephone listing

(c) N.Y. Times News Service

New York — Some people want to see their name written large on the pages of history.

Lucille Natkins will settle for small print in the telephone book.

Some people will pay any price to achieve their goal.

Lucille Natkins refuses to shell out a dollar a month to achieve hers.

Lucille Natkins is one of a number of people, most of them women, who have wearied of being submerged in their spouse's identity in telephone directories and are seeking equal listing but not the special billing that telephone companies impose for the service.

And, joined by some friends, she has complained to the New York State Public Service Commission, which is not alone among state regulatory agencies in having received such complaints. Telephone company policy on listings has come under attack in Vermont, Idaho and Washington.

According to a New York Telephone Co. spokesman, it is policy throughout the Bell System, of which the New York Telephone Co. is a part, to impose an extra charge for a separate listing and not to offer what are known as double-gender listings — John and Mary Doe, for example.

"When you buy the service," the spokesman said, "you get a telephone, a book and a listing — but one listing."

Mrs. Natkins, a high school social studies teacher who lives in Great Neck, N.Y., with her husband of 29 years, Mortimer, a lawyer, regards this policy as unfair.

"It puts pressure on one of the persons in the marriage to submerge his or her identity," she said.

For a separate listing, the New York Telephone Co. charges a dollar a month, and the spokesman said that annual revenues from this charge were about $2 million.

"It shouldn't be necessary," said Mrs. Natkins of the charge, adding that she would accept a double-gender listing such as M.J. and L.J. Natkins, or Mort and Lu Natkins, which, she maintains, would take up no more than the one line in the Nassau County directory needed now to list Mortimer J. Natkins. (Actually Natkins is listed twice.)

Mrs. Natkins said, "I don't want to be put in the position of having to pay extra money to list my own name, or for one of us to have to make a choice as to which identity is going to be surrendered."

Aware that the choice of which spouse is listed in the directory is left to the subscribing family, Mrs. Natkins said, "I know that what the phone company is doing is not discriminatory, but the effect tends to be."

The women who have their own listing in telephone directories tend to be single, divorced or the wives of doctors, she maintained.

In response to Mrs. Natkins' criticisms, a New York Telephone Co. spokesman maintained that the cost of putting out its directories would rise "substantially" if it had to grant a separate, free listing to each husband and wife. And that cost, he maintained, would have to be borne by all subscribers.

Although no formal challenge to standard telephone company listing procedure has yet been filed in Michigan, the State Public Service Commission carried out a study of costs involved in a revision of the policy of the Michigan Bell Telephone Co., the state's largest with 5,577,000 telephones.

According to Robert B. Nelson, assistant director of policy for the commission, it was determined that about 400,000 additional lines would be needed in directories in a conversion to double gender listing. The cost of the conversion was put at about $1,709,000 in initial clerical charges, he said; additional annual printing expenses were put at $240,000.

And, with reference to double-gender listings, such as M. J. and L. J. Natkins, he pointed out that someone who wanted to find Mrs. Natkins would have to examine all Natkins listings, since her initials would not appear in alphabetical sequence. In the case of Mrs. Natkins, this might not be burdensome, but it would, he said, be time consuming in the case of someone looking for L. J. Smith — unless the person using the directory also knew the initials of her husband. And if this were true, he implied, the need for the wife's listing would be unnecessary.

Most teen-agers prefer thin

New York (AP) — Most teen-agers would rather be thinner, reports a Department of Health, Education and Welfare survey of health conditions of youths between ages 12 and 17.

Although two-thirds of the youngsters felt that their weight was right for their age, more than half of the survey group felt they should weigh less.

Response to survey questions showed that more than half the girls who considered themselves "below average" on the popularity scale preferred to be thinner. About half of the boys would rather be taller, regardless of popularity.

If you have stamina, art odyssey worth it

By H.L. Hoffmaster
Star Staff Writer

People with passing to profound interest in art now face a considerable odyssey in Lincoln a several hundred piece exhibit in eight buildings.

It really is a two-part exhibit: —The Nebraska Small Sculpture and Drawing Show at Nebraska Wesleyan's Elder Gallery.

—A special exhibit for the Mid-America College Art Conference being held in Lincoln this week. This exhibit is spread around at Sheldon Art Gallery, National Bank of Commerce, and Architectural / Kimball/Woods/Richards Halls at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, plus the second floor of the eatery-drinkery Sweep Left.

Justly forming valid opinions about every piece is impossible and expressing opinions is limited by the few thousand positive and negative adjectives found in the dictionary.

The "exhibit" is not convenient.

Examples: —Kimball Hall is open only during recitals and whatever is exhibited in that building is, for all practical purposes, out of sight.

—The National Bank of Commerce bank of dining areas on the eleventh floor, and the walk-between-the-desks-and-around-the-office workers atmosphere of the concourse is not top art appreciation atmosphere.

—Woods Hall on campus is a masterpiece of how not to design a building to display art. For those who don't know, Woods Hall is an art classroom building.

Ignore the inconveniences because everything is worth it, a festival of everything visual.

And here it is, building by building:

Elder Gallery

A fascinating show of small sculpture and drawings, representing "the best" of such art submitted from a ten-state area. Located in O'Donnell Auditorium, 50th and Huntington. Runs through Dec. 12.

The best of the best is of course strictly judgmental, but here's some to argue with:

—"Katy No. 3," oil pastel by Prilla Brackett, Lincoln. A fat lady, delicately presented.

—"Quiet Woods," oil pastel and graphite, William Chandler, Brown Deer, Wis. A place full of joy.

—"TV Chair," graphite, Karin Bloom, Fremont. Realistic sneer at the television, dispenser machine age.

—"Self Portrait 1976," graphite, Christopher J. Hickey, Lincoln. A bit pretty, nicely subtle. Look closely, don't miss the window or you'll miss the best interplay of the show.

—"A Page of Entertainers," graphite, John F. Kutzik, Ft. Collins, Colo. Unexpected intricacy, beyond art decor almost.

—"Pants," graphite, Barbara Manger, Milwaukee, Wis. Funny underwear; and a flower with some greater meaning that completely escapes me. So what?

—"Mother and Child," pastel, Carol Rustad, Lincoln. Wombish comfort in green on tan.

—"As If I Chose This Dream," ink, John Thein, Iowa City, Iowa. Hooded woman riding small lizard. Sounds dumb, looks good an impelling haunt.

—"Old Man," graphite, Jean Welstead, Fremont. A sense of enormous wisdom and calm.

—"Landscape With Figure," bronze, Don Bartlett, Columbia, Mo. Physical and philosophical perspective of man in nature.

—"Balta I," bronze, Leslie Bruning, Omaha. Turns bronze into warm wood and intimately related figure forms.

—"Maternal Flower," brass, Ron Rice, Hays, Kan. Supreme grace.

Sheldon Gallery

Critiquing this portion of the multi-building exhibition is beyond the space allowances of this page or two pages. The impact of the display, about 200 of the gallery's best, is too heavy for simplistic quickies. But if you ever wanted a display of Sheldon's art lode, if you ever wanted to see a collection that includes the works of Lautrec, Stuart Davis, Edward Hopper, Edouard Manet, Goya, Hogarth, Winslow Homer, Rouault, Picasso, Matisse, Klee, Thomas Hart Benton, Grant Woods, Kandisky, Miro, Whistler (and the list goes on), plus photography, plus experimental art media, and a tremendous sculpture collection, this is it. But don't just look for "name" works, for in this gallery show, every one of the hundreds of works in masterful. Runs through November.

Sweep Left

Second floor loftish room above the tavern at 815 O St. is rather a terrific gallery. There isn't the hush implied by the more formal atmosphere and a visitor could stand in the middle and give a raspberry to a painting (and there's some candidates in this portion of the show). The the critic could pop down for a beer and feel good. Members of the UNL art department faculty are showing at Sweep Left. Through Saturday.

Woods Hall

Building off southwest corner of Sheldon Gallery. Students work displayed in the halls and up the stairs. Will give a preview of what's coming up...a lot of good teachers apparently. Through November.

Architecture Hall

South of Sheldon, across sculpture garden. Students working toward masters are exhibiting here. They aren't masters yet, unless at thinking up titles. Through Nov. 10.

Richards Hall

Second building west of Architecture Hall (you've come this far, why not finish?). A few large pieces, by undergrads. Through Saturday.

NBC

Corner of 13th and O Sts. It's nice to have the bank offer display space, and the UNL alum artwork exhibited is mostly exciting. If you go to NBC though, the concourse hangings require you to wander in back of working staff and in between desks and in front of desks and between potted plants and pillars. For the agile and brash only. The eleventh floor mixes meals and media midst restaurants and meeting rooms. You might have to impose on a few dull sessions...but you could always laugh during a speech. By the way, catch the dirty dishes counter in the Pioneer Room. It's as much art as some of the other presentations. NBC's part of the art display also lasts only this week.

The bidding:

South - West North East
3 NT Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead — two of diamonds.

Some plays are regarded as exotic or fancy, but quite often these plays are both logical and necessary.

Consider this deal where West leads a diamond. Let's say East takes the ace, dummy and declarer following low, and returns the jack of hearts.

South wins, cashes the A-K of clubs, and plays the king of diamonds, East showing out. It is the end of the road for South. Eventually he goes down one or two, depending on the course of play.

This outcome is not surprising, because, if declarer played this way, he should expect to go down. Dummy's club tricks get lost in the shuffle because there is no entry to cash them. This lack of communication is obvious when dummy first appears, and declarer cannot properly plead surprise.

But let's suppose South is by nature a very meticulous declarer who, when he sees trouble ahead, tries to prepare for it. In line with this, when East plays the ace of diamonds at trick one, South drops his queen on it!

This play eventually pays handsome dividends. South wins any return, cashes the A-K of clubs and king of diamonds, then leads a diamond towards dummy's ten. Sooner or later he gets to dummy with the ten of diamonds and scores ten tricks.

You could call dropping the queen of diamonds on the ace a fancy play, which it is, but it is surely justified by the circumstances. It guarantees the contract, come what may, and is therefore the right play — fancy or not.

Note that declarer does not even lose a trick by dropping the queen on the ace. He wins two diamond tricks despite his seeming generosity. But more important than that, he makes the contract.

Wife outraged by irreligious advice

DEAR ABBY: I wish you would please stop sending people to doctors just because they aren't sex maniacs.

My husband, at 58, mind you, started listening to all those sex-crazy men at work and decided that something must be wrong with him because he lost interest in sex. Then he went to his doctor who told him that some sex expert named Kinsey took a vote and found out that most men NEVER wear out.

Now, really? I wonder who he asked? Probably a lot of men who were ashamed to tell the truth.

Well, anyhow, this doctor told my husband if he wanted to get his manhood back, he should imagine that he was in bed with a beautiful young woman he had seen in the movies or on TV! How do you like the nerve of that doctor giving my husband permission to think all those filthy, adulterous thoughts while he was in bed with me!

I'm a God-fearing, church-going woman, Abby, and I think that doctor should lose his license for handing out immoral advice. Your opinion, please.

DISGUSTED IN ATLANTA

DEAR DISGUSTED: Although fantasies are a part of every normal person's life, there is a Biblical injunction against "thinking adulterous thoughts." If such advice were given by a preacher, he might lose his license to preach, but doctors aren't preachers.

DEAR ABBY: A handsome little fellow in our neighborhood has been pretending that he is a dog ever since he was a toddler, and now he is nearly kindergarten age.

He doesn't just "pretend" he's a dog, he actually ACTS like one. He makes barking and whining sounds just like his dog. I think he would eat and sleep with his dog if he were allowed to.

It is not the normal love of a boy for his dog, Abby. I asked him why he likes to pretend he's a dog, and he said, "Because it's more fun to be a dog!" He cannot talk plainly but he seems intelligent otherwise.

Shouldn't his mother be told that her child may need special guidance or treatment? Sometimes parents are so close to a situation they can't see it. How can I tell her? We are just nodding neighbors.

CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: It's awkward to go from a nodding acquaintance with your neighbor to a heart-to-heart discussion about her child's development. If you're truly concerned, initiate a closer friendship with her. (P.S. When the child goes to kindergarten, his teacher will surely recognize the problem, if there is one.)

DEAR ABBY: A bachelor wrote to say that whenever he applied for a job, as soon as they learned that he was over 30 and unmarried they lost interest in him. He claimed that his single status also made him suspect as a homosexual — which he is not.

Abby, as a personnel manager for many years, I have interviewed hundreds of job applicants, and if two equally qualified men apply for a job and one is married and the other is single, the married man usually gets the job.

Why? Not because the single man may be a homosexual, but because without a wife, family or "roots," a man is more apt to quit his job. Not so with a married man. His family obligations make it necessary for him to stick with his job.

Training employees is very expensive, so you can't fault businesses for giving preference to the applicant who is more likely to stay with the job.

J.M.C.
DEAR J.M.C.: Thank you for giving the other side of the picture.

Wire service names Fuller new president

Boston (AP) — The board of directors of The Associated Press announced that Keith Fuller has been appointed president and general manager of the news cooperative to replace Wes Gallagher, who retired.

Fuller, 53, had been responsible for the general operations of the news service since May, when the AP board designated him as Gallagher's successor. He held the title of vice president and deputy general manager.

The announcement Tuesday came at an AP board meeting here.

Fuller's career with the AP spans 27 years and includes supervising coverage of the 1957 integration crisis in Little Rock, Ark., where he was chief of bureau.

Proposed titles show readers are optimistic and forward-looking

By Joanne Farris
DEAR JOANNE FARRIS: Hi! Has anyone come up with the idea of "Age Wise" as a name for your column?
Ideas to keep elders from being bored? They need to keep in their homes something they have to give care to, such as plants to water, pets to care for (be they even gold fish). Cats are easier than dogs; all you need is a litter box! Signed, Cleo Chamberlain, Indianapolis.
ANSWER: "Age Wise" is a super title idea!
I reviewed several hundred title suggestions, and a number of readers urged me to leave the title alone. Here is one of the don't-change-the-title letters: "I certainly enjoy your column and have gotten many ideas from it. Please don't change the name. It fits perfectly."
Life really does begin at age 40, even though a person's younger life was fun and pleasant. We who are over 40 and way beyond are more able to do more of the things we craved and planned for in our younger years." Signed, Louise G. Williams.

The exciting thing that I discovered from the name-the-column contest was that readers of Life Begins at Forty enjoy life and accept, even relish, the challenge of living. Many readers suggested such titles as "Take Life as it Comes," "Live Every Day," "As You Are," "Living Abundantly," "I Am What I Am," and "I Love Life."
Consciously or unconsciously the titles the various readers made up for this column reflect their own outlook toward life. In many cases the title was a re-statement of a basic rule which that person lives by. And, wonderfully, almost every one of them was optimistic, forward-looking, or warmly accepting life as it comes to them.

Laura Batzer, 83, of Oneonta, N.Y., used a column of mine as source for her title selection. The title: "Here and Now."
The column quotation from which it came is a statement of my basic life-stance: "For me, good mental health means that I accept myself as I am and like me that way. I do not carry around unrealistic expectations about what I can do, and I do not allow myself to try and live out any fantasies of what I might like to have happen in my life. I live in the here and now and do my best to enjoy that and to be happy and help those I love to be happy and fulfilled."
Pauline Trent looks at life this way. "Life for most of us does begin at 40, because at 40 we face a new cycle in our life. Conscientious daily living in our speech, habits, general programming, personal times plans all have changed due to our children having reached a 'teen-age.'"

"For many of us, even Life Begins at 50 is very different from the 40-50 decade. Basically, however, in any and all cycles, life is what you make it. If you want a happy life, you can make it that way. Accept each day, and at the end count out your 'givings' and your 'receivings.'"
As all you regular readers have realized, we decided on balance to leave the column title alone; it has attained a degree of reader-acceptance and reader-recognition which mitigated against any change.
All the title suggestions and comments were gratefully received.
Joanne Farris welcomes your questions and comments. Write to her, in care of this newspaper.

Hairy chest is big thing today

San Francisco — Down to North Beach to give the spaghetti a vote of confidence. "That's the stuff putta hair on you' chest," the waiter tells me.

Not likely. I can't even grow hair on my head.

Big thing now to have hair on your chest and expose it. You leave the shirt unbuttoned to the belt line. You've got the cleavage of an ape.

"The chicks dig it, man," a hairy fellow told a reporter for an underground paper. "It's the mink look. You know, it's savage."

I spent the summer trying to grow hair on my head. It's a full time job. Creams, rinses, vitamins. Hours under the dryer reading old copies of Vogue. I had my hair cut so that it was combed forward. Julius Caesar did that, too.

Morning coffee warms the heart. (The $8.88 Stevie Wonder record goes on and on. But in a little while she has to go to school. Last night she played it over the telephone to a girl friend for at least two hours.)

What we're really hoping to raise around here is some grass. The country is bone dry. We are waiting for the winter rains.

When the first rains mark the end of our endless summer, the first thing we do is check the ceiling for leaks. If it is not — (God bless the house!) — we're good for another year.

This scatter is OK. I rent it, that's why. If

Postcard

By Stan Delaplaine

I owned it, it would be Sieve City. When I was buying a house, we practically had to carry umbrellas inside the place. We put pans at strategic places. During the night we could hear the plop, plop, plop of rain-drops coming through the roof.

That was another reason I went back to renting. I looked forward to the ceremony of "burning of the mortgage." With all the carrot Vitamin A, I could see forever. But I could not see the end of the payments.

"Let us crown ourselves with rosebuds before they be withered." That was said by the wise Solomon, a chap who had sense enough to come in out of the rain.

No poet has risen to write about chest hair — though Bartlett's Familiar Quotations is running over with poems about women's top pieces.

No novelist has made his hero raise a bush on his brisket. They don't even unbutton their shirts.

For hair on the chest there isn't even a beauty treatment. The hairy fellows just let it grow wild. Maybe run a comb through it now and then.

We passed another birthday, as bare-chested as the day I was born. Not everybody remembers your birthday. But the computer remembered me.

It wrote me a letter: "Happy birthday to you! You have been chosen out of thousands for a scientifically complete reading."

The computer wanted me to send $15. "A bargain price for this significant document."

With the knowledge offered me, I can know when to play the stock market or the bangtails. When to advance and when to seek a foxhole.

"You be the judge. If within 30 days you do not find this invaluable, your money will be cheerfully refunded."

One thing I like is a cheerful computer. Blinking green eyes. Internals that go clink, clank as your refund falls into the payoff cup.

Man asks relief from old flame

Pittsburgh (UPI) — Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned. Ask Robert A. Huntley. Huntley, 31, has asked Common Pleas Judge Francis A. Barry to order Dorothy Darby, 38, to stop harassing him. Mrs. Darby, who used to date Huntley, is charged with:

- Threatening to burn the house of Huntley and his mother while both were inside.
- Telephoning his grandmother and falsely telling her that Huntley had burned to death in a fire that also destroyed his home.
- Calling his employer and saying that Huntley was sick and wouldn't report for work.

- Destroying his pickup truck by setting fire to it last April.
- Pouring sugar four times into the gas tanks of his car and truck.
- Breaking the windshields of his car and truck eight times.
- Cutting or slashing the tires of his vehicles approximately eight times.
- Painting his car and truck about 40 times, often using garish colors.

Stephen M. Sokol, Huntley's lawyer, said his client and Mrs. Darby had dated several years ago but reportedly broke up in late 1973. Sokol said the harassment began in January 1974 and has continued since.

Mrs. Darby has an unlisted telephone number and was unavailable for comment. Huntley said his insurance company has threatened to suspend his coverage if additional destruction occurs.

Judge Barry set a hearing for Nov. 3, at which time Mrs. Darby will have a chance to answer the charges.

"She wants him to marry her and apparently thinks this is the way to achieve her goal," Sokol said.

When Frank Landis was elected to the State School Board there were 5,662 school districts. Now there are 1,203. That's more efficiency in education and a more equitable tax base. We need proven leadership to keep this trend alive.

The stud's a dud

Washington (AP) — Humphrey the camel was bought by the National Zoo last year to father a herd of Bactrian camels. But as a stud, Humphrey's a dud.

"We checked his teeth and everything," said Dr. Theodore Reed, director of the zoo. They overlooked one detail: Humphrey has no testicles.

"Our hindsight was not so good," lamented Reed. Although Humphrey "goes through the motions," as Reed puts it, there can be no little Humphreys.

The awful truth was discovered when personnel at the zoo's breeding farm at Front Royal, Va., began wondering why, after a year of "going through the motions," Humphrey's tribe was not increasing.

Humphrey's plight became common knowledge in the scientific community recently when Reed was called to the stage three times to accept awards on behalf of National Zoo from the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums.

First, there was the Edward Bean Outstanding Birth Award for a kiwi born at National Zoo last year.

Secondly, Reed trooped to the stage to pick up a special achievement award for the zoo's having bred 50 pygmy hippos over the years.

Next came first prize for National Zoo's production of a movie, "Tiger."

And then... for acquisition of a breeding camel with no testicles... the Goof-of-the-Year award. A unanimous decision.

Power pool planning to buy from OPPD

Associated Press
The Nebraska Municipal Power Pool (NMPP) apparently will be able to buy electric power from the Omaha Public Power District (OPPD) during the next year to help meet power needs of member cities across the state.

The cost of OPPD power is about 20% cheaper than power available from the Nebraska Public Power District, according to pool General Manager H. Steve Wacker. NMPP is the usual wholesale supplier for outstate communities.

Contracts have not been signed yet, Wacker said, but OPPD has made a firm offer to sell 40,000 kilowatts of power to the pool, which acts as purchasing agent for member cities.

Another possibility available to the pool and member cities, Wacker said, is replacement and surplus power from the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation.

In both cases, he said, the only apparent hitch to purchase and delivery of the power is reaching an agreement with NMPP to transmit the power over NMPP lines.

The pool, which has been criticized by NMPP, had been negotiating several items with NMPP on behalf of its two dozen member cities, which include Lincoln.

NMPP halted negotiations this fall, Wacker said, but he is attempting to get them restarted, particularly to work out a transmission arrangement.

NMPP attacked the pool and Wacker in a "newsletter" sent to numerous public officials across the state this week.

That newsletter accused the pool and Wacker of "using tactics to discredit and harass NMPP and in the process are turning back the clock to the days when strife and bitterness prevailed in our industry."

"Intuendos, statements taken out of context, unsupportable and unfair accusations, spreading distrust, unfulfilled promises, all have been used in an effort to discredit NMPP," the newsletter charged.

Wacker maintains the pool is simply trying to find the cheapest source of power for member cities, despite NMPP's accusations.

He said the pool asked NMPP about availability and cost of a 40,000 kilowatt block of power, but never received an answer.

So the pool turned to OPPD, Wacker said, and received a firm offer.

Wacker stressed that OPPD was not giving the pool any kind of deal on the cost of power that might lead to speculation about OPPD trying to raid potential or existing NMPP customers.

Pool members are now studying the offer to see if the OPPD power is the most economical they can buy, Wacker said.

A test check of four member cities, spread geographically across the state, indicated the OPPD power will be cheaper than power from NMPP in most cases, Wacker said.

Where studies of an individual city's situation indicates NMPP power is cheaper, Wacker said, that city should buy from NMPP.

Former legislators to present awards

The Nebraska Association of Former State Legislators, the first such group to form in America, will present past lawmakers with service certificates next month.

Association President Ross H. Rasmussen, who served in the 1961-67 sessions, invited all former legislators to the 10 a.m. ceremony Nov. 28 in the Capitol Senate Chamber, where the first certificates ever will be awarded.

"Special honored guests will be legislators who have served in both houses (before the Unicameral was created in 1934) and those who have served as speakers," Rasmussen said.

"The association also places special emphasis on those who have served the longest number of years," he noted, and "in the earliest sessions."

Rasmussen said the association will make a permanent record of all those who receive the first awards, which will be part of all future rosters. The first roster has been published.

Rasmussen, Nebraska State School Boards Association head, founded the former legislators group on March 9, 1976, with aid from Jack Romans of Ord and William Brandt of Unadilla, and the first statewide meeting was held.

Past lawmakers who have died will be recognized as well by certificates sent to their nearest relatives.

"I have always felt that it was a great omission that persons leaving the Legislature have not been honored" with a lasting memento, Rasmussen said. He noted that Vince Brown, clerk of the Legislature, is cooperating to bestow the awards and make association rosters available.

New import rule pleases stockman

Omaha (AP) — The president of the Omaha-based National Livestock Feeders Assn. (NLFA) Tuesday expressed satisfaction that the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has issued a new regulation designed to stop circumvention of the 1964 meat import law.

Donald Hunter, a Centerville, S.D., cattle feeder, said the NLFA supports the new USDA regulation which denies entry into the United States for the remainder of 1976 of any meats processed from meat covered by the 1964 law in trade zones and territorial possessions.

He noted that through most of this year, 35 million to 40 million pounds of foreign beef, mostly Australian, have been entering the United States from Puerto Rico after undergoing minor processing in circumvention of the import law.

Hunter blamed disputes between U.S. State Department and the Office of the Special Trade Representative for delaying the halt to the violation of the import law.

Water use will be considered

The fourth of a series of public meetings to discuss Nebraska's water problems or potential problems will be Nov. 9, in York.

The 7:30 p.m. meeting was scheduled by the Nebraska Legislature's Public Works Committee. It has been instructed to study water and related land resources in anticipation of possible legislation.

Anyone interested in water use in the state is urged to attend the meeting and present their thoughts to the Public Works Committee.

Teachers convention time means many things to many people

By J. L. Schmidt

Star Staff Writer

October 28-29 is many things to many people. For public school students across the state it's a two-day vacation. For their teachers it's two days of extra training. For officials of the Nebraska State Education Association (NSEA) it's a "use it or lose it" proposition.

The two days are, traditionally, set aside for teachers conventions, a phenomenon that dates back 30 or 40 years, according to NSEA convention coordinator Jerry Jones.

Teacher's convention-goers will gather in five cities to hear top speakers and participate in workshop sessions aimed at honing their teaching skills. But how many will gather remains to be seen, and is a source of headaches for Jones and fellow NSEA staffers.

"We've had as many as 16,000 attend our sessions in the past, but the last few years have seen only 10,000 or 11,000 attend, Jones said, noting that NSEA membership is more than 19,000.

Dues from the members are used to pick up the $50,000 tab for the annual meetings, but declining attendance makes that expense questionable, Jones said.

"Perhaps at 54-59% attendance we have a larger turnout than other groups," he added, but attendance figures even decline the second day. Attendance is strictly voluntary.

Kansas is holding its last teacher conventions this year, Jones said, but surveys of NSEA members still show strong support for a Nebraska fall program.

Jones issued his "use it or lose it" pitch in the Oct. 14 issue of Ed News, the official NSEA publication, noting that "each year the board of directors and the delegate assembly look at the declining attendance with a questioning eye."

Nationally known speakers are being featured at three of the five convention sites. Georgia legislator Julian Bond will address the Lincoln session Thursday morning at Pershing Auditorium. Will Rogers Jr., son of the well-known humorist, will speak on the "World of Will Rogers" at sessions at Wayne State College. Former U.S. Interior Secretary Steart Udall will speak at Kearney.

Bond, no stranger to Lincoln, having spoken at the University in 1969 and 1975, will give the opening address at 9 a.m. The founder of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee and a four-term legislator, emphasized the need to "dignify vocational as well as academic training" during his speech last year.

The balance of the day will be spent in a variety of inservice workshops at various Lincoln locations. Exhibits are set up in the basement level of Pershing. Workshops will also dominate other sites.

Politics will dominate the Omaha sessions with addresses set by major candidates for public and state office, including John Y. McCollister, Edward Zorinsky, John Cavanaugh and Lee Terry.

Warren Cook, public relations chairman of the National Livestock Auction Marketing Association, will tell Chadron conventioners "What I'd like to have you teach my child." The rest of the Chadron session will be conducted by Educational Consulting Associates of Denver, a group that's "highly acclaimed and very much in demand," according to Jones.

Various educational groups are also using the two days for their state conventions. The Nebraska Choral Directors Association will hold its sessions at Kearney High School. The Singing School Belles, Lincoln's

The Nebraska Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation will take a plunge in the new pool at Scottsbluff Senior High School. The joint city-school facility recently opened, and Richard Jackson, a Scottsbluff native, will give professional scuba diving instruction.

Several Lincoln schools will open their doors to workshops ranging from mathematics to jazz and modern dance. But not all the school activity is for the teachers.

Pershing School, 6402 Judson, will host a Halloween activity for students and neighborhood children from 7-8:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday nights. The sensory experience is one of several in the schools that were set up under the direction of school art coordinator Roger Van Deventer.

Exhibits make use of overhead projectors, film projectors and phonographs, in an "attempt to display new uses for this equipment," Van Deventer explained.

Eastridge School used its displays as part of a Halloween party Wednesday and a similar exhibit played to a packed house at Havelock School Tuesday night. The parent group at Havelock used the event to distribute reflectorized patches for safety and a school resource officer spoke on trick or treat safety.

Traditional door-to-door trick-or-treating is set for Sunday night in Lincoln.

Hearing may be held to set control area for water use

United Press International

A hearing may be held in December to establish a control area in the Upper Republican Natural Resources District to regulate the use of what once was regarded as Nebraska's inexhaustible resource — water.

The Upper Republican Natural Resources District Board held informational meetings on the matter at Imperial Monday night, at Grant Tuesday night, at Madrid Wednesday night, and will hold another at Benkelman Thursday night.

The NRD area in Dundy, Chase and Perkins counties has generally experienced a serious lowering of its water levels since 1952, apparently because of irrigation.

In his report, Eric G. Lappala, a geologist who made a water supply study, said water levels had declined as much as 16 feet, the flow of streams had dropped as much as 19%, artesian wells lost pressure and recoverable groundwater in storage was reduced.

He said the groundwater is being withdrawn faster than the underground reservoir is being recharged and that some areas could be without water by the year 2000 if the present trend continues.

Bob Milner, the NRD manager, said there are more than 2,200 irrigation wells in the three-county area and more than half of them are center pivot systems, each capable of covering hundreds of acres.

Lappala said center pivot systems have been placed on some tracts not necessarily suitable for irrigation and that water has been wasted.

In some cases, he said, "there is no apparent relationship between water needed and water being pumped."

The effect of declining flows on downstream areas was pointed out by Willard Schlegel of Rural Culbertson, joint chairman of the Frenchman Valley and the Hitchcock and Red Willow irrigation districts which have water rights going back to 1890.

Those districts are losing their water supply, he said, adding that water delivery to users has been reduced from 18 to 12 inches and the number of acres irrigated has also been reduced.

The two districts have requested that a water control area be established.

Milner said several controls could be adopted if such an area were established. They include allocation of pumping, rotation of groundwater use among irrigators, more restrictive well-spacing requirements and closing of the area to new wells.

The Legislature's Public Works Committee plans a water hearing at Imperial Nov. 8, Milner said.

Water diversion laws backed

Wilcox (UPI) — The South Platte United Chambers of Commerce board of directors has adopted a resolution urging the 1977 Legislature to enact legislation on the "transbasin diversion" of water concept.

The resolution "encourages" the Legislature to adopt a bill allowing transbasin diversion of water from a river basin with surplus water resources to a river basin deficient in water resources as "a feasible method of improving utilization of Nebraska's water resources."

However, the resolution said four "general conditions" should be satisfied before such legislation is enacted.

The need for supplemental water in water-deficient basins should be justified and an efficient legal and scientific system of regulation and conservation of ground water uses should be designed, the resolution said.

Diversion also should be subject to all existing water rights and justified for each project to ensure that needs and rights of cooperating basins are adequately satisfied.

The fourth condition called for diversion to be permitted "only for beneficial purposes, including but not limited to water resources management, artificial recharge programs to stabilize areas of critical ground water depletion, protection and maintenance of irrigated areas already developed and development of potentially irrigable lands with limited water supplies.

County tops Ak-Sar-Ben earnings

Omaha (AP) — Lancaster County exhibitors at the 1976 Ak-Sar-Ben 4-H Livestock Show topped all counties from a seven-state area for the second consecutive year with $1,241 in premium earnings, according to figures released Wednesday by Ak-Sar-Ben.

Cuming and Washington counties ranked second and third, with earnings of $1,152 and $906 respectively. Gage County, took fourth place in premiums earned with $600.

Final tabulations from the 1976 auction showed that exhibitors received more than $58,000 from sales and contributions provided by the Purple

The Purple Ribbon Club is comprised of businessmen in the Omaha trade area who have contributed $100 or more or purchased a purple ribbon animal at the show.

The 5th through 10th counties in premium earnings were:

5. West Pottawattamis County, Iowa, $626; 6. Saunders County, $624; 7. York County $612; 8. Platte County $495; 9. Douglas County $459; 10. Pipestone County, Minn. $454.

Lutheran teachers will meet

More than 250 Lutheran school teachers from the Nebraska District will gather in Lincoln for a two day convention Thursday and Friday.

Convention headquarters will be Calvary Lutheran Church and School at 1800 S. 84th, according to Orville Elmshäuser, principal at Trinity Lutheran Elementary School and public relations spokesman for the convention.

A series of in-service workshops Thursday will be capped by a banquet at the Knolls, he said. Friday sessions will include the naming of the "teacher of the year."

Box will no longer be used to punish deaf boy

By Roxinne Ervasti

Aurora (AP) — A cardboard box intended to modify behavior of an 8-year-old deaf boy will no longer be used, Aurora School Supt. Don Burling said Wednesday.

The parents of Steve Larson, who was left profoundly deaf after he recovered from meningitis three years ago, and others complained this week to the school, the Hamilton County sheriff and welfare officials about use of the box.

This has been blown out of proportion, said Charles Ponce, county welfare director. "The box was the size of a refrigerator, was open on the top, and had a cut-out for kids to enter it. I can see no punishment as far as being made physically uncomfortable."

The box was placed in Larson's classroom upon recommendation by Tom Pickton, education consultant from Hastings. School officials said it was used for Steve and two other boys several times but never for periods longer than seven minutes.

"Its purpose was to reduce disruptive behavior," Pickton said. He said "time-out" boxes are used in Hastings schools and that there have been no parental complaints.

Steve Larson had been "violent" toward other children on several occasions, Pickton said. The boy's father, Steve, said the family had not been told about the box, but they had consented to having their son placed in a corner and had asked that he be spanked if he was troublesome.

"I object to the box," Larson said. "I was in the service for seven years...I know how the spirit can be broken through constant use of a box, whether it is made out of stone, wood or cardboard."

He said Steve had had problems getting along with children but none had been reported recently. He said that last week his son started to refuse to go to bed alone or in darkness.

"He's a fragile boy and should not be subjected to these tactics," Larson said. The Larsons' son sees a psychiatrist, Larson said. He said the therapist told them to continue any methods of dealing with Steve before his deafness and that is why he asked that Steve be spanked in school if he was delinquent.

"It's simply a communications foul-up," Dr. Burling said. He said that because the staff had discussed "quiet times" with Steve's parents, it was probably assumed that they would not object to the box.

The district wants the boy placed in the state deaf school in Omaha but the Larsons, who learned deaf sign language after their son's illness, object and have filed an appeal with a state board established by the Legislature to handle such disputes.

G.I. site considered

Washington (AP) — The Cornhusker Ammunition Plant at Grand Island, Neb., is to be considered for a possible site for the master control station of a new global navigation system for the Air Force, according to the office of Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb. A spokesman said the Air Force has notified Curtis that it will choose a central U.S. site for the station and the Grand Island facility is one of four such sites being considered. An estimated 150 to 300 persons, about half of them civilians, would be employed at the control station, the spokesman said.

Hamburg suit dismissed

Gering (AP) — Scotts Bluff County District Court Judge Alfred Kortum Wednesday dismissed a suit filed by former Wyoming Congressional contender Al Hamburg against county commissioners and the Scotts Bluff Star-Herald. Hamburg initially had filed suit against the commissioners in an attempt to prevent the sale of his deceased father's house in Gering for back taxes. He filed a motion seeking to join the Star-Herald as a defendant after the paper published a story questioning the authenticity of evidence presented in the case.

Vacationers spent more this season

Non-resident tourists spent 27.5% more for travel-oriented goods and services during the 1976 vacation season than in the 1975 season, according to a recent Department of Economic Development survey.

John Rosenow, state travel director, said there were approximately 7.5 million non-resident visitors to the state this year from Memorial Day through Labor Day.

He said he expects year-end figures to show expenditures of about $500 million by resident and non-resident tourists.

Student grant loss for state 'unlikely'

Omaha (AP) — A former federal official's statement that Nebraska is in danger of losing its federal student incentive grant allotment next year is disputed by Sam Jensen, chairman of the Nebraska Coordinating Commission for Postsecondary Education.

"I think it's unlikely," said Jensen, an Omaha lawyer.

He said the federal government would be discriminating against Nebraska if it tried to cut off the allotment because the Nebraska Constitution prevents the state from matching the federal dollars.

Jensen, whose commission administers the incentive grant funds, was responding to remarks made in Omaha last Friday by John D. Phillips of Washington, D.C. Phillips, a former deputy commissioner for postsecondary education in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, is now president of the newly formed National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities.

He said that under new amendments to the Education Act, Nebraska would lose its federal allotment after July 1, 1977, because the state does not distribute the grants to students attending nonpublic colleges and universities.

Nebraska's share of the $44 million federal incentive fund this year is $331,000.

Jensen said Nebraska recently changed its policy and now makes such grants available to nonpublic students if their schools will match the federal money.

Metro Tech to build South Omaha campus

Omaha (AP) — The Metropolitan Technical Community College board has agreed to a $3 million campus in South Omaha, with the work to be under contract by December.

The board worked out a rent-and-buy plan Tuesday night with a nonprofit corporation. The buildings will be sold to Metro under a purchase contract. Robert E. Schweser Co., Omaha investment bankers, will put up the money to build.

Two proposed buildings are expected to be completed in a year. The Rev. Anthony Petrusic, chairman of the board's building and sites committee, said Metro would reimburse the firm and take title to the campus in four years.

Father Petrusic said Metro will use revenue from the one mill tax it levies annually for capital improvements to pay for the project. He said the nonprofit corporation probably will consist of several Omaha businessmen as yet to be announced.

Plans and specifications for the campus are to be ready for the board by Thanksgiving.

School books, classes labeled anti-American

Bellevue (AP) — A high school history textbook is among several school books and teaching programs that were criticized as anti-American at a meeting of 25 Bellevue citizens Tuesday.

A candidate for the Bellevue school board, Myrna McCulloch, organized the meeting. She said the meeting was not intended as a part of her campaign. Mrs. McCulloch said another meeting will be held on other educational issues involving Bellevue schools.

Air Force Sgt. Frank Rogers did most of the talking at the meeting.

Rogers and John Bitzes, a history teacher at Omaha Bryan High School, criticized the history text as being pro-Communist and as presenting an unfavorable, distorted view of free enterprise, American values and other aspects of the nation's history.

The book is "Perspectives in United States History" by Field Educational Publications, Inc.

Huskers gearing for Kansas wishbone attack

By Ken Hambleton
Star Sports Writer

Coming off a loss to Missouri and facing Kansas this weekend in Lawrence won't be easy for the Nebraska football team, but coach Tom Osborne feels his Huskers may have an advantage.

"I think we'll have an advantage in that Kansas is the first wishbone team we've faced this year," Osborne said, following Wednesday's two-hour workout. "They're going to be guessing how we're going to defend them, unlike when we face Oklahoma at the end of the season and there are films to look at how we defend the wishbone."

Kansas runs a true reading wishbone, according to Osborne, so the Huskers will limit the number of different defenses usually run during a game.

"We've been seeing a lot of shifting on defenses against us, and we've been doing some ourselves, but that's the kind of thing you do against a team that audibles (changes plays at the line of scrimmage)," said Osborne.

"With a reading wishbone, there aren't audibles called because with the triple option the offense itself doesn't know where the ball is going until the play is started," Osborne said. "Reading wishbones are kind of a trend over the last couple of years. And I think that the teams that aren't reading are having more trouble moving the ball."

Osborne said that Kansas wishbone should work well with KU's backfield personnel.

"Scott McMichael is similar to Missouri's Pete Woods," said Osborne. "He's a big guy that can throw and run. He's a better passer than Cromwell (injured quarterback Nolan) and you can't just let him run or he'll beat you."

"Last year we concentrated on stopping Cromwell and did a good job but we have a history of Steve Davis (Oklahoma's former quarterback) beating us," Osborne said. "So we'll try and stop all three phases of their running game."

Osborne said he expects to see Kansas employ shifting against the Huskers, though. "We expect to see defenses do that against us from now on. When a team calls a lot of audibles because a defense is set up a certain way the defense can adjust by jumping around," he said.

"Against Missouri, we tried to run a play on Ferragamo's first sound in order to catch the defense off guard," said Osborne. "But one time the Missouri defense called 'shift' and our line jumped offside."

"But I think we solved what Missouri was doing defensively. It was more a matter of not taking care of the ball," said Osborne. "We only had three punts in the whole game so I don't think it was their defense that caused most of the problems."

Osborne said the senior I-back Dave Gillespie, who was sidelined again by a hamstring injury, was the only player doubtful for Saturday's game. I-back Monte Anthony "ran well" in practice and fullback Dodie Donnell is recovering from a sore hip.

NU starting middle guard Jeff Pullen, a 6-0, 215-pound junior, said that the main thing in facing a wishbone team is there are less defenses to play because there are fewer things to worry about with a wishbone.

"They're going to be running more, and there are only so many variables they can run at you," said Pullen, who leads the team in tackles behind the line of scrimmage, 8 for minus-27 yards.

"My responsibility will be the fullback," he said referring to the Jayhawks' Norris Banks. "And it's just a matter of getting to the ball quickly."

"Playing middle guard you don't get to see the play develop because you're down so low," said Pullen. "But, by feeling the way the center tries to block you, you can figure out which way the ball is going."

"The most important thing is being able to take three quick steps and then changing direction in one step the other direction," said Pullen, who has logged 39 total tackles this season.

"You also have to do a bit of wrestling on a pass rush when the guard and center both block me. You have to throw a guy one way and then come back to get the ball carrier," Pullen said.

Six schools capture positions in state high school playoffs

By Chuck Sinclair
Prep Sports Writer

Four schools joined early qualifiers Lincoln Southeast and Centennial as prep teams headed for the Nebraska state high school football playoffs after Wednesday's unusual heavy slate of games precipitated by the teacher's convention.

But Wednesday's results that saw Tekamah-Bertram, Decatur, Alma and Bridgeport earn playoff berths will undoubtedly leave several coaches scratching their heads, especially Bennington's Larry von Tersch.

von Tersch's Bennington squad finished the 1976 season unbeaten and untied with a 9-0 mark, but fell short of the needed points to oust Class C-1, district 2 qualifier Tekamah after its big 42-6 win over Lyons, also Wednesday.

After a 66-0 thrashing of Barneston, coach Ken Cook's defending eight-man champion Adams appears to be virtually out of the playoffs and a chance to defend with Hampton's 42-14 win over Rising City.

There is an outside chance for Adams, but Hampton's regular season foes Marquette and Bradshaw must tie Friday night to force a tie-breaker, counting the wins of opponents according to the Nebraska School Activities Assn. point system.

Class D Homer took one step closer to qualifying in district 2, aided by a 20-14 Cedar Bluffs loss to Mead.

Cedar Bluffs had been leading the district prior to Wednesday night, and its loss, coupled with a 35-0 Homer win over Ponca, gives Homer the edge.

One of two regular season Homer foes, either Newcastle or Bancroft, must come up winners Friday night to assure Homer of the playoff berth.

Decatur qualified in district 2, 8-man with a 16-0 win over Macy.

Ironically, Humphrey, which also won

Wednesday night 56-6 over Bartlett, was edged by Decatur despite a win over Decatur just two weeks ago.

With the addition of Bridgeport to Class C-1 with Centennial and Tekamah, district 3 is the only one lacking a playoff-bound team in that class.

Alma clinched its Class C-2, district 4 playoff spot with a 26-14 win over Arapahoe to become the only C-2 team qualified as of Wednesday.

Classes B and D remain untouched after Wednesday's play.

State High School Playoff Qualifiers

Class B — All districts undecided.
Class C-1 — District 1, Centennial, 8-0; District 2, Tekamah, 9-0, 27-6; District 4, Bridgeport, 9-0, 45-9.
Class C-2 — District 4, Alma, 9-0; all others still undecided.
Class D — All districts undecided.
Eight-Man — District 2, Decatur, 7-1, 43-1.

Ex-NU coach Bush dies at 62

Gerald L. (Jerry) Bush, former Nebraska basketball coach, died Wednesday night at age 62.

Bush, of Lincoln, reportedly died of a heart attack, and was dead on arrival at Lincoln General Hospital.

The Nebraska basketball coach from 1953-64, had been vice-president of Universal Assurors Inc. of Omaha following his resignation from the NU Athletic Department.

Known as the "Big Bear of the Coliseum," Bush took over the Husker coaching post when Bill Orwig took over as Athletic Director at Nebraska.

Bush had been head coach at Toledo University after playing five years in the NBA as an all-pro with several different teams including the world champion Ft. Wayne Pistons.

Previous to that, Bush was an All-American basketball standout at St. John's University of Brooklyn, N.Y., where he was raised.

Bush, who never had a winning team during his nine years at Nebraska, resigned his post, because "he didn't think he was doing as well as he thought he should," former NU athletic director Tippy Dye said from his home in Florida.

"He had an excellent relationship with his players and was one of the greatest guys I ever knew," said Nebraska baseball coach

Jerry Bush ... Ex-NU Coach

Tony Sharpe, who was Bush's assistant basketball coach for nine years.

"Our families were very close and he was a fine family man," said Sharpe.

Nebraska track coach Frank Sevigne, who was brought to Nebraska by Orwig, the year after Bush arrived said, "Jerry was one of my closest friends. When my wife and I came to Lincoln, Jerry showed us around the town and we have been close friends since."

"He had an outstanding personality and was a good worker and a great teacher of the game of basketball," said former athletic director Dye.

Probably the highlight of his career at the NU helm came in the 1957-58 season when the Huskers beat Kansas and Kansas State, ranked 1-2 in the nation, in succession. Kansas was led by Wilt Chamberlain and Kansas State won the Big Eight title.

One of Nebraska's most popular coaches, Bush was in heavy demand as a speaker and despite losing seasons, his enthusiasm won him countless friends and fans.

A press clipping from 1963, just after Bush resigned summed Bush's association with the Nebraska fans: "He has provided far more than victories and injected into the community and the state an enthusiasm and good nature that is far more valuable than victories on the hardwood courts. On these terms, Jerry Bush leaves Nebraska as a real winner."

Duck hunt great for Mahoney

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Editor

Tekamah — New Nebraska Game and Parks Commission director Eugene Mahoney won't argue with the reports that the ducks and geese are beginning to push into the state. In fact, he probably made the reports himself after last weekend's hunting.

"It was fantastic," he said. "I've never seen anything like it."

Mahoney, who took over the controls of the commission this past summer, has a private hunting setup north of here. He's been hunting on the Hundahl farms for the past 12 years but this weekend was one of the best hunts he's ever been witness to.

Mahoney told of Saturday's hunt while hunting Sunday with brother Dick Mahoney and a friend from Omaha, Steve Smith from Lincoln. Creighton predated student Bill Kearney from Omaha, Dr. Ben Mechel of Burwell, Lincolnite Ken Johnson, who is chief of wildlife for the commission, and myself.

"It was great. I don't think we've had that many mallards coming in before," he said. "All day long."

"I'll bet we didn't have 30 minutes between shooting," Kearney echoed. "It was one of those days that's a real pleasure to hunt."

Mahoney, a gracious host, hoped Sunday's hunters would do as well. We did better.

Sneaking into the blinds along an 18-acre lake, darkness slowly lifted from the overcast morning. Ducks were moving in Saturday's fashion. Wave after wave. And then along about mid-morning, it happened.

I had looked out of the blind to the east, over the Missouri River. In the distance a massive flock of something was beginning to drift our way. Binoculars indicated geese.

Everybody down in the blinds and dead silence, except for an occasional, "Oh, man, look at that."

Mahoney has a setup of Ralph Kohler, decoys. The geese apparently liked what they saw because they wanted to set down. Waves of them. Blues and snows.

"That's about as many geese as have come in here at one time," Mahoney said with a wide grin a short time later. "Wasn't that something?"

About 250 geese in the flock had come into the decoy set. They wanted down in the winter wheat field behind the blinds and just as the first wave was directly over the blinds, Mahoney yelled, "No-o-o-w-w-w!"

final count showed only seven geese fell.

"I just can't pick out one bird in a situation like that," Mahoney said and several others agreed. "There were just too many of them."

Ducks continued to come and go until the hunters limited out with an assortment of species. Then about noon, Kearney, Mechel, Smith, Johnson and I had to pull up stakes. Monday morning, Mahoney called to tell us we'd made a mistake.

"We stayed on to hunt geese," he said. "Dick Elston (Tekamah conservation officer) joined us and they came in. It was around 2:30 p.m. when close to 1,000 of them came."

"Over the river we heard this clattering and wave after wave of snows and blues. My brother and his partner got so excited they had to drink a cup of coffee quick. It was one of those things Dick Elston said he'd never seen before. We got two more geese out of 1,000. You couldn't get yourself to pick out a bird."

It was a once in a lifetime thing, according to Mahoney. Ducks and geese both were making massive movements and he and his hunting companions were there to witness and partake.

"I don't think I'll ever see anything like this again," he said. It was heaven on earth for waterfowlers.

OU ticket probe has discrepancies

Tulsa (UPI) — A university of Oklahoma investigation into alleged ticket scalping by members of the football team has turned up some discrepancies, the Tulsa Daily World reported Wednesday.

The newspaper reported from Norman, Okla., that a "source close to the internal problem" as saying the extent of the discrepancies could not be determined, but "it is more than we like to think about."

OU officials began the investigation two days ago after the Oklahoma City Times reported the National Collegiate Athletic Association was looking into allegations football players have sold game tickets at inflated prices through coaches to generate a player "payroll."

Coach Barry Switzer has denied the NCAA was investigating OU. He said it is NCAA policy to notify the university president in those cases, and that has not been done.

The World quoted some university officials as saying they believe the NCAA is investigating the university, but has not notified Dr. Paul Sharp, OU president, because the investigation is not being done on campus.

"I think they are doing it by talking to former players to find out how it works," one OU official told the World.

"The discrepancies found by the internal investigation apparently are of the same nature as the improprieties being examined by the NCAA," the newspaper said.

Crete's 32-6 win spoils Kasperek's coaching finale

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

Fifth — The emotional edge was supposed to belong to Norris here Wednesday night, but Crete played with much greater intensity to score a 32-6 non-conference football triumph, spoiling Ken Kasperek's curtain call.

Kasperek ended seven years at Norris with a 44-15-4 record and is retiring after 21 years as a head coach with a 133-46-6 career record.

"We thought Norris would really be up for coach Kasperek tonight. But we had plenty to be psyched up for ourselves," offered Crete fullback Zane Morton, who burned Norris' defense in the first quarter with a 57-yard touchdown run and 13-yard touchdown screen pass reception with 13 left in the first half. "If Schuyler qualifies for the state playoffs, we'll represent the east division in the Central 10 playoffs and that would be sweet revenge for me against Grand Island Northwest," Morton noted.

Morton, a 190-pound senior, broke his leg against Northwest in the first game of the season in a 22-7 Crete loss. He missed Crete's next four games before returning to action against York at linebacker only.

"I told my dad I would make it back in the lineup or die," said Morton. "I lifted a lot of weights and hauled a lot of bales to try to heal up quicker. I'm not a farmer, but I work on the Frank Lothrop farm a mile east of Crete every night I can and every weekend. That's helped my strength."

Morton put Crete in first-half command with his two touchdowns, but Kasperek

The score was 7-0. Crete, with Norris threatening at that point. But Doug Reiss, a junior middle guard, rushed in to block the field goal. June, another junior, scooped it up and raced unopposed into the end zone.

"I thought we were really going to be in for a tough time tonight," Crete coach Mark Ward said. "When Zane broke that first touchdown on a dive, that sort of got things rolling."

"We were having a tough time with their No. 73 (junior defensive tackle Bill Jacobson)," Ward said. "When we couldn't move against him, we decided to go to the other side and we seemed to get the job done there the rest of the game."

Tom Ourada applied the clinching touchdown on a 64-yard gallop with 4:43 remaining in the third quarter, giving the Cardinals a 32-0 cushion.

"I looked up at the scoreboard and saw that, and I couldn't help thinking the worst I had been beaten before was 31-0 against Omaha Cathedral when I coached at South Sioux City," Kasperek said. "And Gretna whipped us pretty here at Norris in the first couple of years."

Kasperek, a Crete High School and Doane College graduate, concluded a coaching career which had six stops — at Nelson, Exeter, Tekamah, South Sioux City, Ceresco and Norris.

He coached four unbeaten teams and served as an assistant coach for the South Shrine Bowl team last summer. Kasperek, 49, will concentrate on his vending machine business, insurance work and helping with the tip sheets at the Nebraska State Fairgrounds during hores racing season.

"I didn't intend for the kids to know this was going to be my last game," Kasperek said. "But somehow through the grapevine, they found out."

Crete finished the regular season with a 5-4 record. Norris, the victim of four close decisions, finished 3-6, marking Kasperek's first losing season at the consolidated school.

Kasperek finished 2-2-1 in his five meetings against hometown Crete.

Crete — Morton 32 yards from Braynard (Morton kick).
Crete — Jiravec 19 run (kick blocked).
Crete — Ourada 64 run (kick blocked).
Norris — Keller 5 run (pass failed).

Pheasant opener improved

Saturday's 1976 pheasant season opener is shaping up and should be improved slightly over a year ago. Southeast Nebraska has a higher pheasant population (up 16 per cent) and the rest of the state is, if not slightly improved, about the same as last year.

The pheasant season brings us around to another topic of interest to pheasant hunters. That is the state's pheasant stocking program.

Now in its second year, the state donated last spring 81,970 pheasant chicks to volunteers for raising, then releasing. Some 61 per cent of those birds made it to release time, ages seven to eight weeks.

"We really got what we were after," commission chairman Art Brown said of the pheasant stocking program. It was initiated as an incentive to keep habitat available for birds. One of the raising stipulations is that the volunteer have a place to release the birds.

Brown said a survey of those cooperators indicated some 53,061 acres of land were set aside by the volunteers for game habitat. An additional 29,407 acres of farm land also were taken out of production by pheasant raisers to ensure habitat.

That's nearly one acre per bird sent to volunteers, according to Brown. And at 60 cents cost per chick, "that's pretty cheap habitat which wouldn't have been there without this stocking program," Brown said.

"Originally, this thing was set up as a public relations program," the chairman continued. "I think we've received tremendous public relations from it. I have personally received 79 newspaper clippings, all from different newspapers around the state, about pheasant stocking. The participation of the people has been the key and I have had nothing but praise for the program."

Other commissioners noted support coming from these areas. North Platte commissioner Tod Kuntzelman said his people have indicated, "We are finally using the upland game stamp money for the purpose it was intended," he said. The upland game stamp was originated through sportsmen support to fund a pheasant stocking program back in the days of the late former G&P director Mel Steen.

It's All Outdoors

By Tom Vint

"One rancher out my way said he'd seen six different hens with broods and each of the hens were banded," said Chadron's Bill Lindeken. The banded birds are indicators of the pheasant stocking program since each bird is banded prior to its release into the wild.

Next year's program seems to be headed for even higher goals. Brown said some 90 per cent of the cooperators indicated they would raise chicks again next year.

Brown said that was a promising report. He said South Dakota, another state highly interested in pheasant stockings, showed first year cooperators gaining around a 60 per cent survival rate on birds but went to 70-75 per cent the next year.

"They learn what it takes the first year," Brown said. "Then the second year isn't quite as tough. They don't lose as many chicks as they did the first year."

Ken Johnson, the coordinator for the game commission, said the application period for chicks will be Jan. 1, 1977, through April 1, as was the case this past year.

The commission set a ceiling on the actual number of birds to be given away this year, however, since orders from chick hatcheries could arrive in better shape and be made more easily with an early jump-sum order.

That number is 100,000. Individuals may order anywhere from 25 to 500 chicks and clubs may order any amount they desire but larger requests will be okayed only if club rearing facilities meet state specifications. Orders will be filled on a first-come-first-serve basis.

Danny Ozark, the low-key leader who led the Philadelphia Phillies to their first title since the 1950 Whiz Kids, was voted the UPI National League Manager of the Year.

Ozark, who took over the Phillies in 1973, was the choice of 10 of the 26 UPI baseball correspondents from around the country who participated in the annual survey.

Bill Virdon of the Houston Astros finished second with nine votes, followed by Sparky Anderson of the two-time world champion Cincinnati Reds with five votes and Danny Murtaugh of the Pittsburgh Pirates and Joe Frazier of the New York Mets with one each.

Arnsperger joins Dolphins as defensive coach

Miami (UPI) — The Miami Dolphins, struggling with one of the weakest defenses in the National Football League, hired Bill Arnsperger Wednesday to serve as the club's top defensive assistant coach.

Arnsperger, fired as New York Giants head coach Monday, will take the same job he left in 1974 when he accepted the Giants' post.

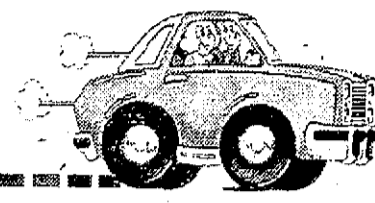

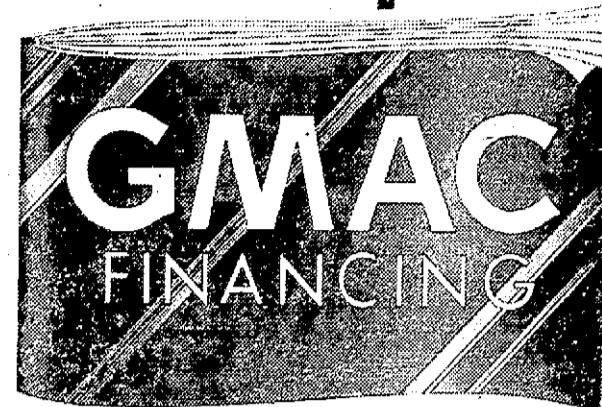

"Arnsperger will be joining the staff as assistant head coach, the same job he had when he left," said head Coach Don Shula.

"I'm sorry things didn't work out for Arnsperger in New York," Shula said. "I've always had a high regard for him and he will be an assistant head coach working with the other three defensive coaches." Arnsperger had just gotten off a plane from New York a few hours before the news conference announcing his new job and said he had not had a chance to assess the Dolphins' situation.

"I'm just glad to get back here with Don and Joe Robbie."

Voters to decide Sunday racing

Broken Bow (UPI) — Custer County residents will decide at the polls this Tuesday whether Sunday racing, with its parimutuel betting, is a matter of breaking the Sabbath, or only another form of Sunday recreation.

But Leo Cooksley, chairman of the Custer county fair board, says economics and convenience are the only factors motivating the board to ask on a "special issue" ballot for Sunday quarterhorse racing at Broken Bow.

"Many out-of-town patrons find it impossible to get here during the races, which now run Thursday, Friday and Saturday," Cooksley said. "If we get Sunday racing, it will not add a day of racing; we would only shift the schedule to Friday, Saturday and Sunday."

State law prohibits Sunday horse racing unless approved by county voters.

The financial impact racing has had on the area during its first two years has been more than anticipated, he said.

Cooksley said 60 per cent of all purse money is retained in the area in the form of business services. Backing him up is Chuck Koozer, president of the Chamber of Commerce.

"That's not an exaggerated estimation,"

Koozer said. "The financial impact has been excellent."

Cooksley said 15 cents of each dollar bet is retained at the track to cover purses and other expenses, including taxes. Excess profits, he said, go back into the area in the form of public service projects.

Cooksley said tracks in Nebraska cannot be privately owned, as they are in most states. Therefore, he contended, revenues from racing serve the public's interest.

In addition, he said, the track is now hiring more than 100 persons during the racing season.

Big Eight statistics unchanged

Kansas City, Mo. — No, the team statistics released by the Big Eight Conference this week aren't carbon copies of last week's stats — it's just that there weren't any new leaders in the various categories. In fact, even the various other places occupied by the teams hardly changed.

The Kansas Jayhawks remained on top in the rushing-offense standings again this week. Although their per-game average dropped by about five yards, they still hold a 315.7 to 287.9 advantage over runner-up Oklahoma.

Iowa State continues to lead the other three offensive categories. In team passing, the Cyclones upped their average from 178.8 yards per game last week to 185.6 this week. Nebraska is in second place with a 179.0 average.

In total offense it's ISU once again on top in this category, as it is averaging 448.6 total yards a contest. Missouri hung on to its second spot with a 413.9-yard-per-game average. ISU has held the top spot in this particular category ever since the season began.

And in scoring offense it's Iowa State but, this time, by a very slim margin over Nebraska. I-State holds a 33.6 to 33.0 lead in average points per game.

On the defensive side of things Nebraska continues to be the dominant team on the charts. It holds the lead in rushing, total, and scoring defense.

On the ground NU is giving up an average of 95.3 yards a game, while runner-up Oklahoma yields 150 a contest.

In total defense it's the Cornhuskers on top with a 232.9-yard-per-game average. OU is again in the runner-up position, as it was last week.

And in scoring defense the Huskers and Sooners run one and two again. NU is on top, giving up 12 points a contest, compared to OU's 12.3.

The Sooners, however, do lead the Conference in pass defense, as they allow only 96 yards a game through the air. Oklahoma State is the new runner-up in this category, giving up 107.3 yards a game via the airways.

Borg signs with WCT

Dallas (UPI) — Mike Davies, executive Director of World Championship Tennis, said Wednesday WCT had signed seven of the world's top 10 ranked players, including newly acquired Bjorn Borg of Sweden, to play in its $2.5 million tour next year.

Jimmy Connors, acknowledged as the No. 1 rated international player, was signed earlier this week. Borg, defending WCT champion, 1976 Wimbledon winner and currently ranked second in the world, was brought into the fold Wednesday.

Other top players (and their world rankings) in the tourney: Ilie Nastase of Romania (4), Adriano Panatta of Italy (5), Eddie Dibbs of the U.S. (7), Manuel Orantes of Spain (9) and Harold Solomon of the U.S. (10).

"While the higher-ranked players obviously provide us with a nucleus of great players, we think the entire field is truly outstanding," said Davies.

Planners won't give four-plex exemption

The City-County Planning Commission Wednesday refused to grant a special permit for a four-plex which was opposed by neighborhood residents.

The residents of the building in Eden Circle argued that the four-plex had been created illegally by remodeling a duplex without city permission.

Even though the remodeling already existed, the argued, it would be wrong for the city to remedy the situation by granting special permission retroactively.

The residents said the four-plex was creating parking problems in Eden Circle.

In other action Wednesday the commission took the following actions:

—Postponed until next month request for change of zone from AA rural and public use to G local business at northwest corner of Hwy. 2 and Pine Lake Rd.

—Approved final plat of McArthur's 1st Add., west of 40th St. and north of Cornhusker Hwy.

—Approved change of zone from AA rural and public use to A-2 single family west of Arnold Heights and one-half mile north of W. Adams St.

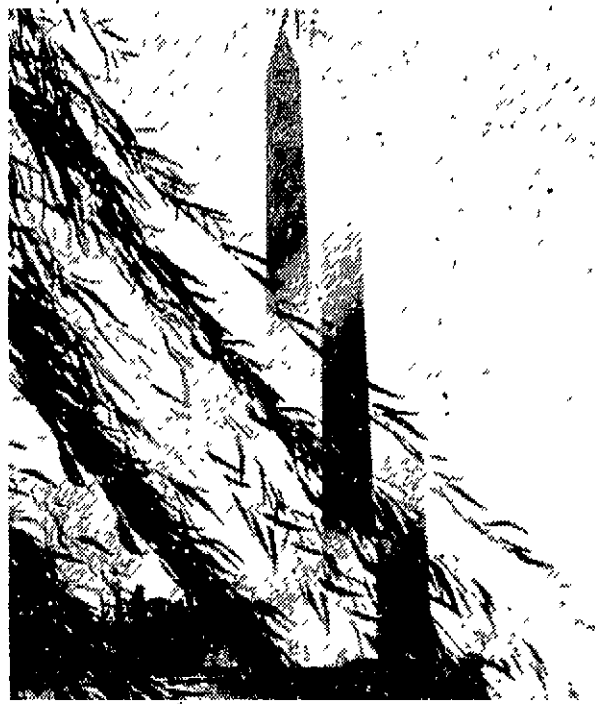

—Denied change of zone from AA rural and public use, A-1 single family and G local business to K light industry at southeast corner of Old Cheney and 54th St.

—Denied change of zone from AA rural and public use to H-2 highway commercial on north side of O St. and north to I-80.

—Denied change of zone from A-1 single family to G local business at 70th and A.

—Approved special permit for parking lot west side of 70th about 100 feet north of Adams St.

—Approved vacation of portion of 42nd St. between South and Franklin Sts.

Romans sees bar owners in woodwork

Associated Press

Nebraska Public Service Commissioner Jack Romans says bar owners would dominate the Public Service Commission if two Democratic candidates are elected.

Response came quickly from the candidates he named, Mrs. Joyce Durand, candidate in the 1st District, who has been partowner of a downtown Lincoln bar, and Donald Jensen, Democratic candidate in the 3rd District who owns an Omaha bar.

The Public Service Commission sets rate and service standards for utilities, public carriers and warehouse operations in Nebraska.

In a news release, Romans said "we already have a bar owner-operator on the commission, representing the downtown Omaha district, although he has, as required by law, now divested himself of his interest in the establishment."

Romans said he referred to James Munnely, a Democrat and former owner of Duffy's Tavern.

"The possibility of three persons from similar interest groups is just too much for a public body that must be sensitive to all consumers," Romans said.

Jensen said Romans formerly was in the trucking business, an "industry that does daily business with the commission."

He said "that would be more of a conflict of interest than a person owning a bar and restaurant."

Jensen said he has made arrangements to sell his bar and restaurant if elected.

Mrs. Durand said she was part-owner of a lounge in Lincoln for four months and sold her interest about March 1.

"I'm not ashamed of it at all," she said. "I also have been a school teacher, a translator, a real estate salesman, a bus driver, a musician, a legislative aide, an accountant and a lot of things. And for 19 years I've been a mother."

Mrs. Durand, director of budget and research for the commission, said Romans' comments were "silly."

Prasch is also a part-time weatherman

Lincoln Public School Superintendent John Prasch admits that he isn't a very good weather forecaster.

Prasch told a group of parents Tuesday night that it's his word which calls off school in case of inclement weather.

"I'm wrong so often, I'm getting a little sensitive about it," he said.

Prasch noted that a young Omaha student discovered the secret number for an Omaha radio station's school closing phone and called to tell them there would be no school, early during one of last year's snow storms.

They tried to hold school, but the prank caller turned out to be a pretty good judge of the weather, it turned into a blizzard, Prasch noted.

"Maybe we could borrow his services," he added.

Mayor still doesn't want transportation department

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

Mayor Helen Boosalis indicated Wednesday she still is putting up roadblocks to a City Council proposal to create a new transportation department.

In a report to the council, Mrs. Boosalis said she is opposed to the creation of a new department, but favors the consolidation of transportation areas into a division within the City Public Works Department.

Steps are proceeding to create that division, which could be operational by next April, Mrs. Boosalis said.

For the last several years Councilmen Bob Sikyta and Steve Cook have pushed for the creation of a separate department pulling together a variety of transportation-related agencies. Recently, other members of the council indicated their willingness to proceed with the suggestion and asked the mayor for a report.

Various agencies which could be included in such a department include traffic engineering, the Lincoln Transportation System, transportation planning, city garage, maintenance of city vehicles, parking meter collection, street lights and coordination with the autonomous Airport Authority and Railroad Transportation Safety District.

Mrs. Boosalis said a decision on creating a department should not be made until 1979, when the city's contract with a management firm running LTS expires.

At an afternoon news conference, Mrs. Boosalis said she questions the need to form a separate department at this time.

The mayor's span of control is broad, she said in a written report.

"Creating a new department would add to this workload" and could cost additional money to pay a department head.

Key to city denied 'Ol' influenza bug'

Mayor Helen Boosalis refused to roll out the red carpet for a visitor Wednesday and as if that wasn't bad enough, the mayor denied the visitor the mythical key to the city as well.

By a formal proclamation, including four "whereases" and one "therefore be it resolved," Mrs. Boosalis denied the key to the city to the "Ol' Influenza Bug."

And, to prove her point, the mayor rolled up her shirt sleeve and took it in the arm — a swine flu shot, that is.

The mayor, who was administered the shot in her office, said the shot didn't hurt a bit.

Man apparently commits suicide

A 30-year-old Lincoln man died Wednesday afternoon at his home apparently from a self-inflicted gunshot wound, authorities said.

John Davis Jr., of 3048 U St., apparently shot himself in the head, police said. Davis was dead at the scene.

Experts' fees a waste—Kossack

Ted Kossack, candidate for Lancaster County Board of Commissioners, said he thinks local business people ought to be consulted and involved more in the operation of county government.

"I am tired of seeing tax dollars wasted on outside experts, study committees and special commissions," Kossack said.

This is for spring

The belt can be moved up or down for a low or high waistline. Knee-showing skirts have been revived in Paris for the first time in six years.

State defends death penalty

Convicted mass murderer Erwin Charles Simants should die in the electric chair because the death penalty is not an unreasonable sentence, Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas said in a brief filed with the Nebraska Supreme Court.

In a written statement, Douglas said, "The state respectfully contends that the Nebraska capital punishment system does not and will not result in the arbitrary and capricious imposition of the death penalty."

Douglas and Asst. Atty. Gen. Paul Snyder maintained that capital punishment is recognized by the U.S. and Nebraska Constitutions. They said similar death penalty laws have been upheld by the courts since the U.S. Supreme Court's landmark decision in 1972 on the issue.

The briefs were filed seeking affirmation of the Lincoln County District Court's decision sentencing Simants to death for killing six members of the Henry Kellie Family.

The state's brief said Simants' contention that he should have received life imprisonment because he was mentally insane was not a valid argument.

The brief points out that allegations concerning Simants' mental state were rejected by the jury, which found him guilty of six counts of first degree murder.

The state Justice Department also outlined a number of aggravating circumstances warranting the death penalty.

Nebraska's new death penalty law requires the consideration of aggravating and mitigating circumstances surrounding the imposition of the death penalty.

Defense attorneys for Simants argued that there were mitigating circumstances, including the defendant's mental state and unusual pressures he was under.

However, the state quoted from the trial and concluded that Simants knew what he was doing, knew right from wrong and was not insane.

4 WAYS TO CHARGE IT!

Judge's actions hit by Lincoln attorney

By Dean Terrill
Southwest Nebraska Bureau

Fairbury — A Lincoln attorney jumped into the campaign against Gage-Jefferson County Judge Dennis Winkle Wednesday night in what he described Winkle's "arbitrary capricious, unreasonable court."

James McArthur, noting that he has virtually quit practicing before the Beatrice judge because of Winkle's handling of court matters, shared the platform with Beatrice attorney Gary Thompson. Some 200 persons attended the "Citizens for Justice" meeting, the fourth aimed at defeating the judge in the Nov. 2 election.

The meeting became heated as Ron Brackley, Fairbury attorney, co-leading a pro-Winkle committee fired several barbed questions following the speeches. Temperatures especially flared as Linus Betka of Beatrice, anti-Winkle chairman, responded with comparable sarcasm.

Brackley particularly criticized McArthur for coming into this judicial district when he is practicing here very little. The Lincolnite responded he had "dozens of cases and Douglas McArthur" became discouraged.

In his address, McArthur claimed juveniles, parents and attorneys feel Winkle "has ceased to operate a fair and impartial court."

"The perceptions of the people who have contacted us," he continued, "is one of real hopelessness, sometimes almost of despair."

McArthur claimed a negative attitude toward the Gage and Jefferson courts is different than in several other counties where his firm practices.

Thompson, one of few attorneys who has publicly opposed Winkle, drew frequent applause. He noted that several attorneys privately oppose the judge.

One of his greatest concerns, he said, is that Winkle "has knowledge of cases and even makes some determinations before they ever come before him." As a result, he said, there is little respect for the court by "an overwhelming majority" of juvenile offenders.

Hall County official says charge untrue

Grand Island (UPI) — The Hall County Attorney said Wednesday he is concerned about misrepresentation by a group which is fighting for the demise of the council-manager form of government in Grand Island.

Sam Grimmering said there is a publication being circulated called "Citizen's News" which takes him to task for failure to investigate why Grand Island officials did not call a special election on a coal-fired power plant to serve Hastings and Grand Island.

Petitions were presented to the Grand Island City Council seeking an election.

Backers of the special election contended they had enough signatures to call an election and wanted action against the City Council for not scheduling one.

The Citizens News said Grimmering did not investigate the matter and instead told news media representatives that petition circulators were trying to use his office.

Grimmering said the statement was a "purposeful misstatement of fact." He said his office did investigate state laws and concluded there were no criminal charges to be brought, which is the information he passed on to the news media.

Grimmering also said the grand jury, which convened earlier this year, considered the matter and came to the same conclusion he did.

A similar petition drive was accepted in Hastings.

However, earlier this week the Hastings City Council decided there were not enough valid signatures to place the matter up for a voter decision.

The Citizens News was put together by a group called the Grand Island Taxpayers Association.

Custody decision is upheld by court

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

The Nebraska Supreme Court Wednesday upheld a lower court decision awarding the custody of a five-year-old girl to her father, partially because the mother admitted to having an extra-marital affair.

The Lancaster County District Court gave custody of the daughter to Lawrence A. Chiles of Lincoln in a September, 1975, decision. Pamela A. Chiles, the girl's mother, appealed that decision to the Supreme Court.

The court record showed that the wife admitted to having an affair before the filing for a dissolution of the marriage and that she had admitted to several other affairs following the separation from her husband, the Supreme Court noted.

In upholding the district court's custody decision, the Supreme Court said, "While adultery does not, as a matter of law, deprive a parent of the custody of a minor child, it is a factor which may properly be considered by the court in determining the best interests of the child."

The high court also noted the father said he intended to remain in Lincoln. Many family members live in the area, whereas the mother had planned to take her daughter to Vermont where no relatives lived.

The Supreme Court also reiterated its position that it will not change the decision of a lower court unless there is a "clear abuse of discretion" or against the evidence presented in the case.

In its only other decision handed down Wednesday, the Supreme Court also ruled on another divorce case.

Gerald Cozette had appealed a Douglas County District Court decision dividing property between him and his wife Ruth Cozette.

Cozette asked the court to adjust the settlement on the grounds that he should have been awarded a portion of 7,828.8 shares of stock in the Guaranty National Bank of Huntington, W. Va. The district court had awarded $420,000 to Ruth Cozette and $165,000 to Gerald Cozette.

The Supreme Court rejected the husband's contention that he should be awarded some of the stock on the grounds that the couple had been married 33 years. Mrs. Cozette had no job skills, while Cozette retained his job as an engineer, the court pointed out.

Trees part of new Everett image

By J.L. Schmidt
Star Staff Writer

Nebraskans don't need an excuse to plant trees on April 22, in commemoration of Arbor Day. But, in October?

The Everett Junior High student council and parent's advisory group found the perfect excuse for Oct. 27. The planting of six red maples on the front lawn of the 1123 C Street school is "living proof of a new image for our school," according to Principal Dave Van Horn.

With a small splash of ceremony, Mayor Helen Boosalis took her turn at shoveling a spade of dirt into one of the holes dug for the trees. Student council members and parents followed suit. Sen. Steve Fowler took a turn, too.

"These trees are an outward symbol of our pride," Van Horn said, noting the existence of a bad image of Everett in the minds of some. Vandals destroyed some of the trees that once lined the street. Disease took care of the rest.

The trees are another in a series of "positive" steps taken by the school, a series which began with the implementation of a positive peer culture program in the school several years ago.

That program, in use in several Lincoln schools, relies on students counseling fellow students.

The parents also have taken on several projects to bolster the public image of the school. According to Gary Brooks, a member of the parent group, benches are being built for the students to use outside the building while waiting for the bus, or just visiting.

Brooks told the board of education, during a Tuesday night meeting with parents, that he hoped the school would be open long enough to stand under the shade of the trees, a thought expressed again by Van Horn Wednesday.

Brooks told the board that "fighting the image problem" has been a major thrust of parent activity.

"We're trying to keep kids living on the borders (of the Everett boundary) from going to other schools," he added.

Brooks urged the school staff to make accurate information about the school available to realtors who might be showing houses in the area to prospective buyers.

Federal policy on loans unchanged — Knebel

Washington (UPI) — Acting Agriculture Secretary John A. Knebel said Wednesday the administration is keeping its policy of low interest rates for rural electrification loans to farm cooperatives.

In a news conference last week at Lincoln, Knebel said there are only a few cases in which the loans, some at 2% and some at 5%, are necessary.

The co-op leaders are afraid the administration might be moving toward a policy of shifting all rural electric loans to a government guarantee plan carrying regular market interest rates. At the regional meeting in Lincoln Tuesday, they unanimously passed a resolution asking Knebel to explain his statements and say whether they represented a change in administration policy.

Knebel said in an interview that he could not comment on a query from the co-op leaders until reviewing the full text. But he said, "we're not changing any policies, and that includes the rural electrification program."

"We're still using a lot of 5% credit . . . I didn't intend to imply a change in policy," he added.

Omaha school election court challenge dropped

United Press International

The Douglas County Attorney's office, noting the election is less than a week away, said Wednesday there is nothing to be gained by keeping alive a legal challenge to the Omaha School District's election plan.

The statement was made in a written brief filed with the Nebraska Supreme Court and sought affirmation of the Douglas County District Court's approval of the plan.

Darlene J. Clark filed the action, contending she was being deprived of her right to vote. Only six of the 12 Omaha School Board members will be elected this year, and Mrs. Clark does not live in any of the six districts from which members will be chosen.

The situation results from passage of a law requiring school board members be elected by districts instead of at large. This is the first election under that law.

John Q. Powers, deputy Douglas County attorney, said the woman is no more deprived of the right to vote now than will be those voters excluded in the 1978 elections.

Powers said continuity is important in the transition from an at large board to a district plan.

The attorney said, "A casual glance at the difficulties facing the school district in 1978 provides ample justification" for splitting the transition into two parts. The difficulties referred to include court-ordered integration.

"What service could be expected of a ship manned only by unseasoned hands and no old salts?" Powers asked of the Supreme Court.

The law was guided through the Legislature by State Sen. Ernest Chambers, Omaha, who contended district elections provide a better chance for representation of neighborhoods and minority groups.

Weddings 'recreational'

Pretoria, South Africa (AP) — Terming weddings a "recreational activity," a Pretoria magistrate has ruled that permits to buy extra gasoline in South Africa will be granted more readily to people going to funerals than to weddings.

The government has ordered gas stations to close nights and weekends to conserve fuel and save foreign exchange. Magistrates' offices have been flooded with applications for weekend permits to buy gas.

"We have had to refuse applicants who needed petrol for any kind of recreational activity and weddings, unfortunately, fall into the category," the magistrate here said. "People who have to attend funerals which are far away stand a chance of receiving the permits, but only if they produce proof."

Utah speeders plead guilty in mail box theft

Omaha (AP) — Three Salt Lake City people accused of stealing a U.S. mail drop box to recover an envelope containing $108 for a speeding fine were placed on 60 days' probation and ordered to make restitution Wednesday.

John P. Jensen, 20, Steven D. Smith, 18 and Deborah Lynn Lidwell, 21, pleaded guilty in federal court to a reduced misdemeanor charge of theft of property valued under $100. The U.S. attorney had previously charged them with felony offenses, including theft of government property and obstruction of the mails.

Jensen had been ticketed by a Nebraska state trooper Oct. 9 for speeding 94 miles an hour. Under Nebraska law, he was allowed to pay a fine instead of appearing in court.

The three Utah residents placed $108 in an envelope addressed to the local court, and with the trooper watching, deposited it in a mail drop box. They are accused of later returning to try to recover the envelope and being unable to do so, unbolting the box and taking it.

Tips keep Halloween more of a treat

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

Halloween can be a night of fun or turn into a nightmare of danger.

Some planning by parents can avert many accidents and insure that children have a good time Sunday night when the kids turn into witches, goblins and ghosts. The Lincoln Police Department's Neighborhood Resource Officers (NRO) put their heads together and came up with a list of tips parents and neighbors can take to take the "trick" out of treating.

The four NRO officers suggest that parents sit down with their children and review several safety rules, Officer Jim Haynes said.

For instance, remind young people: — not to accept rides from strangers. — stay in a familiar neighborhood. — don't eat any candy until the parents have a chance to check it to be sure it is safe.

— be careful of fruits or unpackaged foods. — go trick-or-treating in groups, not alone. — use the cross-walks and watch for cars. — don't go inside peoples' houses when asking for treats.

Haynes also suggested that parents pick out Halloween costumes which are light colored to make children more visible to motorists. Parents can place reflector tape on costumes, or as armbands and on "trick-or-treat" bags.

The police officers also cautioned parents to check the eye holes on masks to make sure children can see. Poor vision could cut down on a youngster's ability to see steps or oncoming cars, Haynes said.

Rollie Schneider, extension safety specialist at the University of Nebraska, suggests that parents use cosmetics and a lot of imagination instead of buying a mask.

"All you need is some lipstick, rouge, pancake makeup, eye shadow and eyebrow pencil, and you can create a face that's sure to delight your child and not obstruct his vision," Schieder said.

One of the greatest Halloween hazards is fire. Instead of letting children carry candles or matches, authorities suggest that children carry flashlights or battery operated lanterns.

As an added precaution, Schieder urged parents make sure the fabric of their children's outfits are flame retardant.

Haynes also urged parents to accompany children on their neighborhood rounds.

Officer Emery Bashus suggested parents hold neighborhood parties as an alternative to the traditional trick-or-treating custom.

"That way you will know that the candy is safe," Bashus said. "Many parents think Halloween and tricks or treats is getting a little unsafe any more."

Although Lincolinites haven't had the problems reported in some cities with Halloween pranks or unsafe candy, police officers are concerned about the safety of children.

In the past, one of the main problems on Halloween night is when younger children are assaulted by teenagers who take their candy.

Haynes said the four NRO officers, who work primarily in the Belmont, Near-South and Clinton-Malone areas, will be working Sunday night.

Bashus also urged Lincolinites to "be a good neighbor and watch out for other peoples' kids."

Lincoln police again will be aided this year by members of the Nebraska Communications Emergency Team, Capt. Clifton Koch said.

Members of the team will patrol Lincoln streets to report any problems to police on their citizens band radios.

About 20 units helped police last year, Koch said.

Koch praised the members of the team for helping police on Halloween.

"There's no way we could put that many people on the streets," he said.

Officer Haynes urged people to "just use your head and think a little to have a safe Halloween."

Program to aid women inmates

Chemically dependent inmates of the Nebraska Center for Women at York soon will have a friend to lean on.

The Nebraska Task Force on Women, Alcohol and Drugs is launching a new program aimed at linking up women in the center's chemical dependency program with sponsors who will befriend them to ease their re-entry into society.

The York Sponsorship Project was approved unanimously Wednesday by the Task Force.

The project will "make it easier" for the chemically dependent inmates "to adjust to being out of prison," said Mary Ledbetter, project chairperson.

Chemically dependent inmates have a higher recidivism rate, largely because they "often return to the same environment," which is not conducive to recovery, once they have been released, Mrs. Ledbetter said.

Trained sponsors will keep in touch with inmates through telephone calls and visits to the center. Participating inmates also will be eligible for furloughs and short-term leaves to spend time with their sponsors.

Approximately one-third of the women the Nebraska Center for Women or in work release centers are enrolled in the chemical dependency program.

Inmate participation in the sponsorship project will depend on recommendations by the chemical dependency counselor or social service team.

Task force members only will be allowed to be sponsors, Mrs. Ledbetter said. However, interested persons may join the Task Force.

The first training session for prospective sponsors will be Nov. 10.

Poet Gildner missed goal

By Deb Gray
Star Staff Writer

When poet Gary Gildner was in high school, he wanted to be another Ernest Hemingway — for two reasons.

First, the idea of living and writing in Paris, as Hemingway did, appealed to him. And he admired Hemingway's description of fishing, a sport he enjoyed in his native Michigan.

Besides, lyric poets, he thought, were "pansies."

Gildner, who teaches at Drake University in Des Moines, now writes poems. He read and discussed a sampling of his poetry at Nebraska Wesleyan University

Wednesday, the third speaker in the school's Humanities Colloquium series.

Some poems were humorous — like "High Class Bananas," which Gildner wrote after the local Safeway store moved its bananas to a classier display. "Letters from Vicksburg," which Gildner wrote in sonnet form, were translated from a series of letters a Civil War soldier sent his wife.

"First Practice" — from his book of poetry of the same name — told of the brutality of his first football workout in the eighth grade.

Gildner said he wrote his first poem when he was 28. He first wanted to be a novelist.

Gildner has written three novels. None of them have been published — "I can't seem to get them right."

During his days as a parochial high school student in Flint, Mich., Gildner's dream was to be a major league pitcher.

But then, "My arm died." He then broke his leg from sliding into a base.

While recuperating, he first read what he called "fluff" — stories in sports magazines — until his sister brought him a Hemingway novel. His first poetical influences were Chaucer, John Donne and Walt Whitman — "because he didn't sound rhyme-dymy."

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST
By SIDNEY OMARR
Thursday, October 28, 1976
Scorpio makes a "comeback" in November. Many natives of this zodiacal sign will feel stronger, more confident, will piece together bits of information and come up with complete story. Aura of excitement will be present. Scorpio will look better, gain pounds, win friends and influence people.
ARIES (March 21-April 19): You go places, organize, make known your feelings and capabilities. Prestige rises - room is made for you at more elevated position. Capricorn person is part of scenario. Money promises affect agreement, partner or mate. Your beliefs gain more support than you thought possible.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your influence reaches wider areas - some who were "on the fence" come to your side. You're able to finish important project, assignment. You see beyond narrow confines. Your counsel is sought by one you respect. You'll shine!
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Newstarts, added independence - these are spotlighted. Leo, Aquarius play prominent roles in your lives. Your emotions tend to dominate. Impulse buying could shelter budget. Member of opposite sex may be involved. You get to heart of matters. Act accordingly!
CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on security, contractual obligations. One close to you attempts to resolve dilemma. Key is to be receptive, not punitive. Sad songs, stories should be left for another time. If you demand constructive action, you get it. If you vacillate, there is delay and added cost.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be flexible without scattering forces. Be sociable without falling prey to false flattery. Gemini, Sagittarius individuals could be in picture. See picture as a whole - don't get bogged down in petty details. Popularity rating is wowing.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stick to familiar ground - handle basic material. You may have to overturn some procedures in order to rebuild on a more solid structure. Scorpio is in picture - and pushed for action. Maintain balance and steady pace. Refuse to be intimidated by "old timer."
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Check tendency to have situations, people for granted. Some changes are necessary - and cost could be involved. Gemini, Virgo figure prominently. If analytical, you turn apparent loss into solid profit. Member of opposite sex is very much involved.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Getting excited inwardly could "juggle" digestion. Know it and be calm within. Accent on relatives, short trips, special messages. Your life style is spotlighted. Your way of responding to family needs is very much in evidence. You act as peacemaker and find peace in so doing.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on how you earn and spend, what is necessary as contrasted to the expendable. See clearly - avoid delusion, self-deception. Eschew get-rich-quick schemes. Pisces, Virgo persons play prominent roles.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lunar cycle is such that you make independent decisions. Some persons insist you playing havoc with security. But you voice move and make it stick. One "at the top" will support you and low will back you.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You complete significant assignment. One you "adore" is impressed and makes no secret of it. Emphasis on secrets, the far away, the focusing on matters usually considered flimsy, spiritual. You discover a new side of yourself. Others are fascinated. You are a "mystery person!"
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Friendship could intensify into "meaningful relationship." You make new starts, contacts - your views become sharper and you are better able to express them. Leo, Virgo and Aquarius persons could participate in scenario.
BIRTHDAY OCTOBER 28TH IS YOUR BIRTHDAY! You are creative, somewhat arrogant, independent, direct, affectionate. September was a testing month, a time of emotional pressure and eventual "recovery." Now, you are on an upward emotionally and financially. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. You are dedicated, sincere, selfish in some ways generous to your "emies" a disciplinarian where loved ones are concerned. Wonderful surprise is due in December, far beyond the holiday present syndrome.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 5 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 5, add 2. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
